

Arab, Israeli pact plots 3-year truce

By United Press International

An Israeli parliamentary leader announced Tuesday that Israel and Egypt had tentatively agreed on a three-year non-aggression pact and that the United States will give Israel $2 billion in economic aid and assure its oil supplies.

Yitzhak Navon, chairman of Israel's parliamentary foreign affairs committee, speaking on nationwide Israeli television, revealed key sections of the proposed agreement, but he said he must keep 20 clauses of the pact a secret.

He said the accord would remain in effect for three years.

During that period, he said,

Israel and Egypt agreed "not to employ force and not to threaten the use of force against each other and to settle all differences between them by negotiations and by other peaceful means."

Navon estimated Israel will get at least $2 billion in economic aid from the United States and sophisticated weaponry that he would not describe.

He said Israel would also receive compensation for the oil lost when Israel returns the Abu Rudeis oil fields to Egypt as part of the pact.

Additionally, the United States will guarantee Israel's oil supplies if it cannot be bought on the world market and will even supply the oil itself if all else fails, he said.

In the indirect accord by both sides through Washington, the agreement "provides the impression of assurances" for a reduction in the Arab boycott and propaganda against Israel, Navon said.

"I favor this agreement because it is good for the Jews," he said.

He said Egypt and Israel will agree to pursue further means to reach an overall peace, and that the accord will go into effect as soon as it is signed.

He said the pact is in three parts, including a direct agreement between Israel and Egypt, an indirect accord by both sides through the United States and an agreement between Israel and the United States.

Navon did not mention anything about how far Israel will withdraw in Sinai, how far Egyptian forces will advance, or whether American civilian technicians will be manning spy installations in and near the Mitla and Gidi mountain passes in Sinai.

The announcement came as Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger held last-minute negotiations in Washington to nail down an agreement before Kissinger's next Middle East diplomatic peace shuttle begins today.

Announcing other elements of the pact, Navon said Israel and Egypt will extend the U.N. mandate in the Sinai annually, establish a joint committee to supervise the truce and troop withdrawals, and permit Israeli cargo to sail through the Suez Canal.

He said both sides have agreed the pact is to be considered as one step on the road to a full peace, with a final peace settlement to be negotiated at Geneva.

Twelve clauses in the pact dealing with the agreement between the United States and Israel must be kept secret but "they are positive for Israel," Navon said.

The section contains clauses providing for U.S. political backing of Israel and a guarantee of special oil supplies during wartime, Navon said. It calls for the establishment of reserve oil stockpiles for an extended period.

Buck Hill denounces bias rap

BUCK HILL FALLS — An executive at Buck Hill Inn denied all charges of discrimination that had reportedly been filed against the resort Tuesday.

Vice president Jeremiah V. Dillon labeled as "unfair" and "unAmerican" all televised and wire service reports that the resort had denied handicapped guests use of an indoor pool.

Discrimination charges against Buck Hill Inn were reportedly filed with the state Department of Consumer Affairs after 13 handicapped persons from New Jersey were allegedly told their presence was offensive to other guests.

Dillon said Tuesday night that no one at Buck Hill had received any formal complaint and "absolutely no complaint from anybody."

"We are just sitting back in complete amazement," he said. "We have been tried in the newspapers."

"We haven't any idea of what in the world we've been charged with or what we're supposed to have done," he continued.

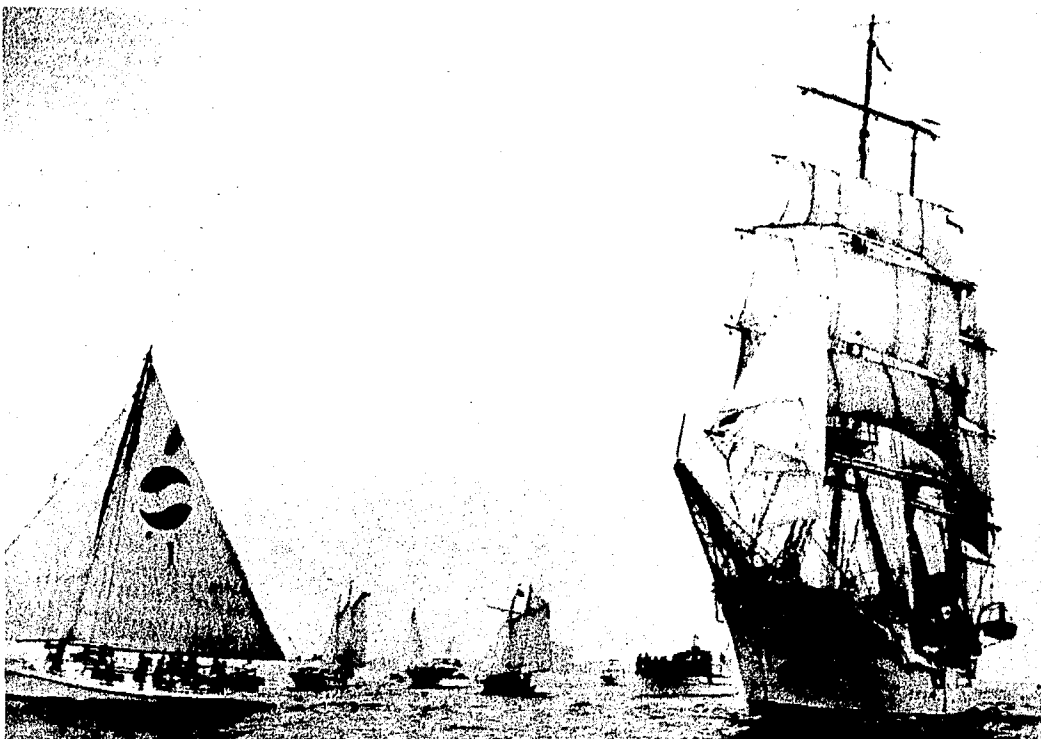

Dillon said the hotel has "never discriminated against anyone."

He said he didn't know if the New Jersey group had stayed at the hotel because of the large numbers of people there.

Space pilot scheduled for surgery

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Astronaut Donald K. "Deke" Slayton — America's oldest space pilot, whose career has been plagued by health problems — will undergo lung surgery in a Houston cancer hospital next week, it was announced Tuesday.

Space agency doctors said they had discovered a lesion in Slayton's left lung, but denied it was caused by the poison gas he and two other Apollo astronauts breathed July 24 during their return to Earth from an historic orbital flight with two Soviet Soyuz cosmonauts.

Soviets urge Red solidarity

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Communist party newspaper Pravda called Tuesday for a display of "massive solidarity" with the Portuguese Communists, ignoring a U.S. warning to the Kremlin against trying to influence Portuguese events.

The call came in a lengthy article signed "Observer," a signature indicating it reflected the views of the highest echelon of the government and party leadership.

It was the strongest Soviet call yet for support of the Portuguese Communists, who, Pravda said, were battling "reactionary forces" backed by NATO nations.

"None of the fighters for democracy and against the Fascist menace, none of the genuine friends of the Portuguese people can ignore the intrigues of the reactionaries in that country," Pravda said.

"It is now most important to show massive solidarity with the political forces in Portugal who are waging a persistent and difficult struggle against attacks from the reactionary elements inside and outside the country."

"It is now important to support the Communists of Portugal who — as it was indicated in the election campaign political program of the Portuguese Communist party — respect, and will continue to respect, the wishes of the people and will fight any attempt to distort them."

Paint chips, rodent hair

Baby food tested for filth

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tests on major brands of baby food showed small amounts of insects, insect parts and rodent hairs present in about one-quarter of the samples, Consumers Union reported Tuesday.

It also said it found paint chips in some of the foods from enamel which flaked off the inside of the lid.

Although it said it did not regard the amounts of filth as high enough to pose a health hazard, the organization said the Food and Drug Administration should take immediate action to remove the particles and to tackle the paint chip problem.

The FDA said it has no specific tolerance level for filth in baby food but does for some of the products which might go into it, such as fruit and cereals. Small amounts of some contaminants are regarded by the agency as unavoidable and more of an esthetic than a dietary problem.

Filth was found more often in the tests than in a 1972 study when only 10 per cent of the

Political riots rip Portugal

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — Anti-Communist violence spread Tuesday to Lisbon, where a crowd protesting the party's call for a general strike stoned the headquarters of a Communist-dominated national labor union.

In Porto, a city in the conservative northern region of Portugal, Communists canceled plans for a mass rally in the face of violence that has seriously damaged the prestige of pro-Communist Prime Minister Vasco Goncalves.

The Communists called off the rally, at which the party's top official was scheduled as featured speaker, within minutes after it was learned that the left-wing military commander of the northern region, Brig. Eurico Corvacho, was forced to resign at the demand of his troops.

The stoning incident in Lisbon came at the end of a march called to protest a Communist-sponsored strike called by the labor confederation known as Intersindical.

Goncalves personally backed the strike to protest anti-Communist violence. It provoked numerous fistfights in downtown Lisbon but was largely ignored in the rest of the country.

The anti-strike demonstration drew about 3,000 persons who marched on the headquarters of Intersindical, located on a hill near the Tagus river.

The crowd hurled rocks and paving stones, breaking most windows in the four-story building. There were no troops or police on the scene until a jeep of military police arrived. They did not intervene and the crowd later dispersed.

In Porto Communists said their rally there was put off for "technical reasons." But there were clear signs that the party's counter-offensive against anti-Communist violence has triggered a backlash.

The Communists issued a statement saying that Corvacho's ouster "could lead to a major confrontation."

The rally was to have included a speech by Communist party Secretary General Alvaro Cunhal.

In Minneapolis, President Ford in a speech warned the Soviet Union "not to fish in troubled waters" in Portugal. In Moscow, the Communist party newspaper Pravda called for a massive display of support for the Portuguese Communists.

Portuguese soldiers sprayed a Communist party headquarters with automatic rifle fire in the northern town of Ponte de Lima.

Ford tells Russia hands off

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — President Ford issued a double warning to the Russians Tuesday — hands off Portugal if they value detente, and negotiate a strategic arms agreement or face a multibillion-dollar U.S. buildup of nuclear arms.

The President, wearing his American Legion cap, told cheering Legionnaires he will have to ask Congress for $2 to $3 billion in additional nuclear weapons if the United States does not reach a strategic arms accord with the Soviets.

And he warned that any interference in the internal affairs of turbulent Portugal would endanger detente.

The President, addressing 7,500 delegates at the Legion's annual convention, vowed to keep America's defenses second to none and warned that attacks on American intelligence activities must not be permitted to lead to "tomorrow's Pearl Harbor."

Ford coupled his warnings to the Soviet Union with a defense of his policy of detente on the second day of his swing through the Midwest.

"Detente must be a two-way street," he said, "because tensions cannot be eased with safety and security by one side alone."

After a round of appearances in Minneapolis, he headed for Illinois to dedicate the Everett McKinley Dirksen Congressional Research Center in Pekin and to address a White House conference on domestic policy at Peoria.

Before Ford addressed the Legionnaires, he told a breakfast meeting of regional news and broadcast executives that he may have to seek as much as $15 billion over the next five years if a SALT pact is not achieved with the Soviets.

Ford described the $92.8 billion defense budget for fiscal 1976 — in which $9.8 billion is earmarked for strategic nuclear weapons — as the "bare minimum required for our safety." He said he would resist all major cuts in "every way I can."

"For the next fiscal year, 1977, I hope to hold down our spending on nuclear forces," he said. "This tentative judgment is conditioned on real progress in SALT II. But the Congress and the American people must realize that, unless agreement is achieved, I will have no choice but to recommend to the Congress an additional $2 to $3 billion for strategic weapons programs in the current and coming fiscal years."

Ford said the United States "is now watching some serious situations for indications of the Soviet attitude toward detente."

"The situation in Portugal is one of them," he added. "We are deeply concerned about the future of freedom in Portugal — as we have always been concerned about the freedom of people throughout the world."

The President said the Portuguese people "must find the solution in an atmosphere that is free from the pressures of outside interests."

Dock labor refuses to load Soviet grain

By United Press International

Complying with an AFL-CIO boycott of American grain bound for Russia, longshoremen in Houston refused to load two ships Tuesday but a federal judge ordered them back to work today while the legal issues are sorted out.

President Ford meantime condemned the work stoppage and said the federal government will seek ways to settle the problem.

The refusal to load the ships, the first major work stoppage since the boycott was imposed last month, came amid indications more Soviet-purchased grain soon would arrive for loading at many eastern ports.

And it angered farmers as grain prices dropped and the prospect loomed of further drops if a serious bottleneck develops in marketing their crops.

The AFL-CIO boycott was called on grounds the Ford administration had given insufficient assurances the Soviet grain sales will not drive up food prices for Americans. In previous years maritime unions have won important work guarantees with threats to boycott shipping bound for Russia.

U.S. District Judge James Noel ordered the longshoremen back to work this morning while a hearing is held on enjoining further work stoppages.

The injunction was sought by grain shippers and freight agents.

Questioned by reporters in Minneapolis, Ford said he would review the possibility of executive action to get the longshoremen to load the grain. He said he would discuss it with Labor Secretary John

Global grain yield trimmed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Drought in several major world farming areas has virtually wiped out the early-season prospect that global grain reserves could be increased by about 16 to 17 million tons over the coming year, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday.

Department economists issued a new World Grain Situation report noting that hot, dry weather has forced a cut of 27 million tons in production estimates for the United States, the Soviet Union and Western Europe since their last summary in mid-July.

As a result, the report said total world production of all grains for the 1975-76 season is now estimated at about 958 million tons, down nearly 27 million tons from the July forecast.

Dunlop when he returns to Washington from Colorado next week.

"It would be tragic and unfortunate if a way cannot be found to solve this situation that has been created," Ford said.

Judge Noel at first attempted to get the longshoremen to voluntarily resume work, but when they refused he issued his order. One party seeking the injunction was the West Gulf Maritime Association, representing a number of shippers.

The association argued that the longshoremen were violating their contract to load the grain and essentially participating in an illegal strike.

Willie Wells, president of International Longshoremen's Association Local 1273 in Houston, said his members stopped work late Monday under an agreement by the AFL-CIO maritime unions that none of the nearly 10 million tons of grain sold to the Russians since July 1 should be loaded.

A spokesman at the ILA headquarters in New York City said loading would not resume on either of the ships at Houston unless it could be determined that the grain on the dock was sold prior to July 1.

One of the two ships, Basanka, was to have carried grain to the Soviet Union.

Los Angeles council urges new Kennedy death probe

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The City Council took the first step Tuesday to join the county government in pressing for a new investigation of the assassination of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, despite opposition from the police department.

Councilman Zev Yaroslavy moved to ask the police department to turn over all files and evidence in the case and was supported by eight of the 14 other council members. The police chief and the police commission already have refused to provide that information to the county.

"The wide cross section of council members who have seconded my motion is indicative of the people's insistence that the answers — or non-answers — we have been given to date are not satisfactory," Yaroslavy said.

Council member David Cunningham would not speculate on whether the police commission and Chief Edward M. Davis would comply.

"It's our responsibility to direct the department to make that (assassination) information available as a public document," Cunningham said.

The resolution calls on the police department to "immediately make available all evidence in its possession related to the assassination of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy," including statements of witnesses, a 10-volume summary of the investigation which never has been made public, raw files, movies showing re-enactment of the crime, photos and crime lab reports of bullets recovered and the left sleeve of Kennedy's coat.

Kennedy was shot in a hotel kitchen in 1968 as he left a rally celebrating his victory in the state's Democratic presidential primary. Scores of persons saw Sirhan B. Sirhan empty a .22-caliber pistol at Kennedy. Sirhan was sentenced to the gas chamber, commuted to life in prison when the death penalty was abolished.

Pressure has been growing to investigate theories that a "second gun" was fired, based on reports that not all of the bullets recovered from Kennedy and wounded bystanders could have come from the same pistol.

Africa in weapons race

U.S. to supply arms to Kenya

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — The United States has agreed for the first time to supply Kenya with military equipment, including supersonic fighter bombers, a U.S. spokesman said Tuesday.

The announcement was the latest development in a major arms race in eastern Africa involving the United States, China and Russia.

The U.S. spokesman confirmed that after months of negotiation the two countries in June signed a $5 million arms credit agreement which will allow Nairobi to buy military equipment from Washington at low interest rates. It was the first such agreement between the two countries.

Officials said the Kenyans were primarily interested in purchasing second hand fighters, including the supersonic Northrop F45 Freedom Fighter which came into production 10 years ago and is considered a match for Soviet and Chinese built Mig21 fighters.

The spokesman said that although the agreement had been initiated, Kenya had not yet actually purchased any military hardware to begin re-equipping its 8,000-strong armed forces. The two governments were still "shopping around" for suitable aircraft, he said.

Washington and Nairobi are also negotiating an additional $1 million loan to train Kenyan pilots. Sources said that as part of the arms deal, Washington has recommended that Nairobi buy American-built anti-tank missiles rather than tanks themselves to try to redress the arms balance on the horn of Africa.

According to diplomatic sources here Kenya, which is traditionally supplied by Britain, decided to modernize its armed forces in the face of a massive buildup by its neighbors and the subsequent spread of concern among Kenyan officers.

Russia has been pouring arms into Somalia and to President Idi Amin of Uganda while China supplies Tanzania.

These sources said in addition to approaching Washington late last year, the Kenyans also put out feelers to Canada for the construction of a small arms factory, to West Germany and possibly France.

Kenya's armed forces are the smallest in the area and would probably prove no match for its neighbors in a war.

Patty's mother testifies

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Mrs. Catherine Hearst appeared before a grand jury Tuesday investigating the alleged harboring of her fugitive daughter last summer at a northeastern Pennsylvania farmhouse.

Mrs. Hearst, wife of San Francisco Examiner president and editor Randolph A. Hearst, refused to discuss what she told the jurors. But afterwards, she showed that her love for her daughter has not abated despite the ordeal she has been through.

"My family and I have been through a great deal," she said. "I'm only interested in getting Patty home safely. We love her and we hope she'll come home."

Brandon Alvey, the U.S. Attorney handling the Hearst investigation, would say only that Mrs. Hearst was "a cooperative witness" who was "helpful to the grand jury."

Alvey refused to say why she was called, but answered "I think it's implicit" when he was asked if the questions involved the harboring investigation.

Federal investigators suspect Jack Scott, former athletic director at Oberlin College, and his wife Micki rented the South Canaan, Pa. farmhouse where Miss Hearst and members of the radical Symbionese Liberation Army allegedly stayed.

One indication of why Mrs. Hearst was called is contained in affidavits filed in a related court matter last week. The Scotts claimed they had telephone conversations with her.

"I really have only seen Jack Scott twice in my life," Mrs. Hearst said.

Frisco cops ignore back-to-beat order

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A judge Tuesday ordered striking police officers back to work but the officers ignored the order.

The restraining order was issued shortly before the end of the first day of a strike that passed without any noticeable increase in crime. Policemen defied the court directive as their representatives and members of the board of supervisors met to consider a new proposal from Mayor Joseph L. Alioto for settlement of the officers' wage demands.

Alioto did not give any details of the proposal, and when asked if there had been any progress he said, "They are at least talking."

A temporary restraining order, obtained by the city attorney, was issued by Superior Judge Robert Dreyer while ordered policemen picketed the building. Officers refusing to obey the order presumably were in contempt of court.

Alioto said the strike, which began late Monday, "absolutely would not be tolerated." Policemen, and firemen who are expected to go on strike tonight, have no right under the law to strike, the mayor said.

Gerald Crowley, president of the Police Officers' Association, has acknowledged that the strike may be illegal, but he said the law was wrong.

Sentiment on the picket line was summed up by one officer who said, "If a nurse can walk away from a patient and a doctor can say, 'To hell with it,' why can't a policeman?"

The strikers, who now earn $1387 a month, sought a 13 per cent pay increase, double the amount provided for most other city employees by a Board of Supervisors facing widespread public protests over a recent increase in tax assessments. Firemen have the same pay scale.

"It may well be the police can bring us to our knees," Alioto said. "Well, if they can, we had better find out about it. That comes close to being a police state."

Since the strike's beginning reported crime has been virtually normal. However, some traffic jams occurred because parking bans in tow-away zones were not enforced and routine accident calls went unanswered.

"There was no panic in the streets last night, nor will there be any today," Alioto said.

Crowley insisted the city's nearly 800,000 residents were "not safe in their homes or in the streets."

Three youths fired 10 shots in the general direction of a picket line at the Ingleside Station. Picketing officers returned the fire, gave chase and wounded one youth in the foot. Investigators later said the youths "were just taking pot shots" and the incident was unrelated to the strike.

In another incident two pickets received minor injuries when they were hit by a car driven by a man who apparently was intoxicated.

Gas prices may lift air fares

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In an unusual response to airline industry pleas, the administration asked the Civil Aeronautics Board Tuesday for emergency rules to let domestic air fares to increase automatically as jet fuel costs go up.

Administration officials said the proposal could cause a hike of up to 3 per cent in airline ticket prices.

The airline industry, which has lobbied hard for authority to pass along fuel cost increases, hailed the administration action as a welcome recognition of its financial troubles. But some sources predicted disagreement within the industry over details of the plan.

The administration request, described as a temporary measure with minimum inflationary impact, was filed by the Transportation Department, the Federal Energy Administration and the Council on Wage and Price Stability.

It was intended to help the airlines cope with higher fuel costs resulting from the Aug. 31 expiration of government controls on domestic crude oil prices. Decontrol is expected to trigger a gradual fuel price increase totaling 3 cents per gallon.

"If some means is not developed by which the industry can pass on higher energy costs, these increases may spell serious difficulty for some carriers whose ability to absorb additional increases in cost has nearly been exhausted," the administration said.

The CAB was asked to set up an emergency procedure allowing airlines to adjust fares promptly and selectively in response to changing fuel prices.

DETROIT (UPI) — A photograph of missing former Teamsters boss James R. Hoffa and a handicapped Florida businessman were mailed to United Press International and Hoffa's son Tuesday. Young Hoffa called it a "cruel joke."

The pictures created a stir before it was determined they were taken about one week to 10 days before Hoffa vanished July 30 in a Detroit suburb.

Police sources said the businessman, C. Monroe Lerman of Orlando, Fla., admitted to FBI agents that he mailed the photographs himself. The FBI planned to question Lerman to find out why he did so.

The picture showed a smiling Hoffa standing behind Lerman, who was sitting in a wheelchair.

Hoffa's lawyer son, James P. Hoffa, called the incident a "cruel joke" and said he could not understand why anyone would exploit the family's emotions by doing it.

Lerman's attorney, Ed Kirkland of Orlando, said Lerman and Hoffa met late in July to discuss formation of a national union for handicapped persons and that the photos were taken at that time by Lerman's wife.

Kirkland said the photograph of Hoffa pushing Lerman was taken outside an Orlando restaurant following a dinner meeting between Mr. and Mrs. Hoffa and Lerman.

Kirkland said he could not pin down the exact date of that meeting and the photograph, but said he would do so today following a meeting with local FBI agents.

"Someone indicated it was in early April, but I think it was later than that," Kirkland said. "It was over two or three months ago. I think it was somewhere in June. My recollection is that it was in the latter part of June and it was long before Hoffa vanished.

"There's no mystery to this," Kirkland said. "Jimmy (Hoffa) came to town to lecture to a group of people interested in prison reform. Hoffa had previously met Doc Lerman at a Teamsters meeting years ago."

"When Hoffa got here, they made a date for dinner. They invited me along because Lerman had an idea about organizing a handicapped person's group and knew of Hoffa's organizing talents. So it was a social evening at a restaurant and Lerman took a lot of photographs like people do."

"One of those photos was taken at the rear of Lerman's Cadillac showing Hoffa pushing Lerman in a wheelchair. Now, there's no mystery about this at all, except how you people got the photograph up in Detroit and that will be revealed after the meeting with the FBI," Kirkland said.

Love conquers even soldiers

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Tall blond man meets beautiful girl lolling on Mediterranean beach. His heart throbs. Her heart throbs. Off they go for a weekend fling in a secret hideaway.

Nothing unusual in that.

Except that he was a United Nations corporal from Austria, she was an Israeli army private and the hideaway was, from her government's point of view, in enemy territory.

The romance was in direct violation of military regulations from the very beginning.

Now, however, the handsome European is back in civilian garb and is tending bar in an Israeli hotel where his sweetheart works as a cook's helper. And while they both are a little regretful about the way they did things, they are still very much in love and want to get married.

"I can only say that we acted like idiotic children during the whole incident," Ernst Steinbrauer was quoted Tuesday as saying of his two days with the 19-year-old Jeannette Farraj of Jerusalem at a U.N. forces camp near Kuneitra, in Syria.

"We have paid dearly for it and we are still paying," the former soldier said.

Steinbrauer, who was kicked out of the Austrian force and sent home soon after the couple was caught on return to Israeli territory, turned around after three days and flew back to Tel Aviv, the newspaper Ma'ariv said.

He's now been in Israel for four months, looking for a job as a crop duster and tending bar in the meantime.

Miss Farraj was tried in a military court last week on charges of visiting enemy territory and associating with a U.N. soldier without permission and was discharged from the army.

Steinbrauer, described as a tall, blond, good-looking man with an athletic build, said he met Miss Farraj at a beach in Tiberias on the Sea of Galilee when they both had days off from their armies.

"One day, after I decided Jeannette was the best-looking and most appealing girl on the beach, I sat down next to her and started talking with her," Steinbrauer said.

"I wasn't trying to pick her up, just talk — about the country, about life here. Then I decided I liked her."

What's news

Ford speaks out on busing

PEORIA, Ill. — President Ford said Tuesday he does not think that busing pupils to achieve racial balance in public schools is the proper way to get quality education. Ford made the statement in response to a question by a delegate to a White House conference on domestic policy and the economy. His reply won applause from the delegates. The busing issue was raised by a delegate from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. "The objective is to get quality education," Ford said. "There must be a better way to do it. We'll carry out the law, but there is a better way." Ford did not say what that way was.

Air Force engine trouble

WASHINGTON — The Air Force said Tuesday more than half of its F111 fighter-bombers have been temporarily grounded because of engine trouble. A statement said that about 240 F111s with TF30 engines were being inspected because of a fire in one of the planes Aug. 14. The Air Force has about 400 F111s, some with different engines. An investigation showed problems in an engine component, the Air Force said, and all F111s with more than 300 hours on an engine will be inspected.

Kidnap over, marriage on

NEW YORK — Sagram's whiskey magnate Edgar Bronfman went ahead Tuesday with plans to marry his pretty British ex-barmaid fiancée in a ceremony today postponed by the kidnaping of his 21-year-old son, Samuel. His son's alleged kidnapers were held, meanwhile, in maximum security cells in a brand new jail already nicknamed "The Prisoner's Hilton," as the state prepared formal kidnap charges against them. The wedding of Edgar Bronfman, 46, to Georgiana Eileen Webb, 25, a former barmaid at her parents pub in England, was to be followed by a gaily-lit reception beside the swimming pool at the 150-acre Bronfman estate in suburban Yorktown Heights, N.Y.

Philadelphia fire still burns

PHILADELPHIA — A crude oil storage tank continued to burn Tuesday, providing a grim symbol for the two multiple alarm fires which erupted at the Gulf Oil Co. refinery Sunday, killing six firemen. Fire officials plan to let the oil burn off from the tank, the one that originally caught on fire early Sunday morning, touching off a six and an 11-alarm fire that roared through the refinery. "The six firemen were killed when oil beneath a blanket of foam exploded into flames as they were hosing down tanks from the original six-alarm blaze. The bodies of all six of the firemen were recovered Monday.

Violence erupts in Thailand

BANGKOK, Thailand — An angry mob of demonstrators which included disgruntled policemen and civilians broke into the home of Prime Minister Kukrit Pramoj early Wednesday. Shots were fired into the air as riot police moved in to stop looting of the residence. A heavily armed police special action force was moved to the scene and Kukrit, who had been at a police station about half a mile away talking with representatives of the demonstrators, was driven to his office at Government House on the other side of the city. The prime minister called an immediate cabinet meeting after reaching his office at about 1 a.m.

Now that's simply not cricket

LEEDS, England (UPI) — The year's most important cricket match between England and Australia was abandoned as a draw Tuesday after the playing field was ruined by vandals demanding the release of a man from jail.

"George Davis is innocent," proclaimed signs daubed on the walls of the Leeds cricket ground. "Justice for Geo. Davis's 20 years."

Davis, an East London cab driver, was convicted and sentenced to 20 years in jail for his part in a $15,400 armed robbery last year.

Davis pleaded his innocence throughout, a plea that gained support from the group who claimed responsibility for the cricket ground vandalism.

Police said vandals poured engine oil onto the Headingley ground's manicured turf and dug small holes in the wicket, the area where the batters stand.

The rival captains of the All-Star teams called off the third "test" match for a mythical trophy called "The Ashes"—the most important competition in cricket—in its crucial fifth and final day.

The decision to abandon the match meant the third test was drawn (no result), and Australia retained "The Ashes." The Australians lead 1-0 in the series, with two matches drawn and one to play.

England had built a lead of 445 runs in its first two innings of the match. Australia had regained 220 of those runs for the loss of its three leading batsmen and England was favored to level the series in a tight finish on the now-abandoned final day.

Nerves that are sick or not up to par because of some mechanical irritation in the spine or some former injury to the nerve cause the nerve to be affected by these changes in the blood stream.

Attorneys debate class action suit

Pike County Bureau
MILFORD — Arguments were heard in Pike County Court Monday concerning a $21 million "class action" law suit filed against Pocono Mountain Lake Estates, Lehman Township.

The suit, filed on behalf of 2,100 property owners, charges the developer allegedly failed to meet sales promises and asks that each property owner receive "no less than $10,000" in damages as a result of lowered property values and inconvenience to residents.

Attorney George Fritz, representing the resident's community association, argued before Judge James Marsh that preliminary objections made by the developer's lawyer should be denied.

Milford suicide reported

MILFORD — Using a 22 caliber pistol, a Pike County realtor committed suicide early Monday in his West Hartford St. office, Milford.

Allen Titus, 57, owner of Titus Real Estate Co., was pronounced dead by Deputy Coroner Fred Kemether at 10:30 a.m.

Titus, who had served in the Air Force in World War II, was a resident of Milford since the late 1930's. A note was found near the body, Stroyan's spokesman said.

Divided DelVal directors agree to hire teachers

MATAMORAS — A majority of the Delaware Valley School Board has decided to hire three new teachers. Some directors feel the district should evaluate "the real teacher need."

Board members Kent Ryder and Eugene Garvey voted against hiring three teachers and mentioned a prior discussion with board members where a teacher replacement policy was discussed.

"I think it's time we take a hard look at hiring replacements. We should conduct a need evaluation to see if we can get along without hiring additional teachers," Ryder said.

Although other board members pointed to increasing student enrollment figures, Ryder maintained the student statistics "do not necessarily reflect the real teacher need in the district."

"The burden of proof is not on me, I think a thorough analysis of situation would answer some of our questions," he said.

Garvey, who supported Ryder's position, also voted against hiring the additional personnel.

Teachers hired by the board were: Mollie Wilson, a music teacher at the middle school, $9,100; Susan Magliaro, fifth grade teacher at the middle school, $8,700 and Mrs. Helen Monisera, high school mathematics teacher, $11,000.

The board also accepted the resignations of Mrs. Eloise Lewis, third and fourth grade teacher at the Delaware Township Elementary School; Dennis Harrington, middle school music teacher; Andrea Cohen, teacher aide at the Delaware Elementary school.

In other action, the board agreed to pay Daniel Poorman $700 for six-weeks work during

West End Fair '75 — bigger and better

West End Bureau
GILBERT — You've heard that old saying, "It's the early bird that gets the worm?" Well if you can become an early bird entering the various categories at the West End Fair this year you could just get $100 to $200 and perhaps more in prize money instead of a worm, if you capture as many prizes as some winners did last year.

Many of the prizes in the various fair categories this year have been increased substantially — some prize money has even tripled. However, all entries in the general categories will have to be entered this Monday night — there no longer will be an opportunity to enter the general categories on Tuesday morning before the fair begins.

The new entry requirements will allow judging to begin Tuesday morning so that fairgoers Tuesday night will no longer have to wait to see what prizes they have won or to view the other exhibits. The new procedure will be especially important since the fair directors predict record entries in all categories this year.

This week the Carbon County Fair in Lehigh Valley has broken all records in the number of entries received. The increase in participation is said to be due to two factors, both related to the current economic crunch.

Firstly, more people are turning to home canning and growing gardens to beat inflation and therefore have more things to enter, and secondly, the lure of fair prize money provides the extra incentive to submit more entries than in previous years.

According to the new fair book, entries in all departments will be accepted from 2 p.m. to 9 p.m., Monday, Aug. 25, at which time all departments will close. No entries will be accepted on Tuesday, Aug. 26.

All exhibits except livestock, will be judged on Tuesday. The exhibits will not be allowed to

Pike pay for 'Minisink'

MILFORD — Pike County Commissioners have approved paying a $1,273.88 bill to the Sheridan Printing Co. for 420 copies of "A History of the Minisink."

Commissioners said they sold over 59 copies of the book, compiled for the Four County Task Force opposed to the Tocks Island Dam project.

Commissioners also approved a $120 payment to Robert Humbert, photographer, and $20.20 to Norman Lehde for information from the Pike County Historical Society. The books are being sold in the county for $5 each.

In another action, commissioners said they could not join Northumberland County and other state counties in a legal action opposing proposed rate increases by the Pennsylvania Power and Light Co.

In a response to Northumberland Commissioners, Pike Commissioners explained they were currently pursuing legal action against Orange and Rockland Utility and its subsidiary, Pike County Light and Power Co.

be removed before 9 p.m. Saturday. Livestock, however, can be removed after 6 p.m., Saturday.

Judging of livestock will start at 8 a.m., Wednesday, after which no livestock will be accepted. All livestock has had to be registered by Aug. 15 in order to be shown at this year's fair.

Blood tests are required for all animals before they can be shown. Exhibitors are urged to put signs on cages reading "Do not handle or feed the animals."

Clothing or other articles should be on hangers in plastic see-through wrappings.

Vegetable exhibitors are urged to check their fair books for specific requirements in categories, while flower entrants should remember to put their flowers in quart or pint jars for display.

One of the biggest increases in prize money offered this year is in the poultry category, where, unlike the other divisions, exhibitors have no limit on the number of birds they show.

Last year, prizes in the poultry category ranged from $2 to $4 for first place and from $1.50 to $3 for second. This year, in striking contrast, first prize in the poultry division ranges from $6 to $8 and second ranges from $4 to $7.

In the poultry division in 1974, one Cresco man captured 99 first and second prizes. If he can repeat the performance this year, his premiums could be in the hundreds of dollars.

Last year, first place blue ribbon for a three-year old dairy cow could have netted the winner $16, whereas this year the same prize might carry $35 with the blue ribbon.

The first prize for sheep is up $3 for first prize over last year with the swine first prizes up to $14 and $15 and the goats up to $11 first prize.

Rabbit premiums have not increased substantially.

In the vegetable category the first, second and third place prizes have doubled, with them now being set at $5, $4, and $3 respectively. Fourth place still carries with it a $1 prize.

Fruit prizes, in general, have doubled, and this year, you can earn a $6 prize if your nuts take first place. Last year first place premium was a mere $2.

Baked goods prizes have doubled and in some cases tripled. Bread, for example, which used to carry a $2 first prize, now awards $6. Canned goods exhibitors can also receive double the premium they would have received last year, and in some cases more.

House plant premiums are up slightly with the flower category up about 50 cents. Arrangements that formerly were awarded $2 for first place, this year will carry, in general a $6 premium.

Sewing and needlework premiums have all increased substantially with an afghan first prize set at $12 this year. Arts and crafts prizes, however, have remained the same as last year.

Premiums in the school exhibits, senior economics divisions, and 4-H divisions are about the same as last year.

The 54th annual West End Fair, which this year will be run for six full days, will open to the public the night of Tuesday, Aug. 26. It will run through Sunday night, Aug. 31.

The Heimat Klaenge German Band will entertain on Wednesday, Aug. 27 at part of the senior citizen's day entertainment. Senior citizens will be admitted free if they show their medicare cards at the gate. This does not include the $1 per car parking fee.

Average man not only one confused by energy issue

By DONALD R. LARRABEE
Washington Bureau
Ottaway News Service

WASHINGTON — On a given day early this summer, no less than 52 committees and subcommittees of the House and Senate were holding hearings on energy-related problems.

People like Frank Zarb, the energy czar; Russell Train, the environmental watchdog; William Simon, who doubles in Treasury and energy matters; and Robert Seamans, the boss-man of the new energy research agency were shuttling from one end of the Capitol to the other.

They bumped into each other, literally and figuratively, giving virtually the same testimony to scores of congressmen who wanted a piece of the action in what has become the hottest issue in town.

If the average taxpayer is confused about the energy issue, it may be because much of the government is confused. And one of the problems could very well be the jurisdictional jungle in Congress.

That's why responsible congressional leaders are saying that the whole energy problem ought to be put in the hands of one committee with the expertise and authority to cover all the bases.

A gentleman by the name of H. Hollister Cantus, who tries to schedule witnesses for the U.S. Energy and Research Development Administration (ERDA), figured out recently that there are 33 committees, 65 subcommittees and one joint panel which claim some jurisdiction over energy. Many of them are clamoring for the same ERDA witnesses at the Capitol each day.

By early June, Mr. Cantus was able to show that ERDA officials had testified for 109 hours of formal hearings before six full committees and 27 subcommittees of 13 different committees. And ERDA, at that point, was only 135 days old. It has been created in January in an effort — at the Executive level — to consolidate the government's energy research effort.

But Congress hasn't yet gotten around to doing the same thing. This means that some long-suffering people like Zarb, Train, Simon and Seamans, have little time to concentrate on where we've been, to say nothing of where we should be going in the energy field.

What is boils down to is that almost every congressman wants to be an expert in energy because it's the newsiest and most popular thing going.

The trouble is, energy is not easily wrapped into one package within the congressional structure. It involves taxes (the Ways and Means and Finance Committees); money (The Appropriations Committees); the ocean (Interior and Commerce Committees), the environment (numerous committees); dams and power (Public Works); budget planning and even Foreign Relations.

Events of the last week in Congress before the August recess began may help to explain the confusion and the dilemma the lawmakers face in producing an energy policy.

The House had been holding three weeks of intermittent debate on what might be considered the definitive energy bill of the Democratic leadership. It is entitled the Energy Conservation and Oil Policy Act, incorporating, as it does, a variety of proposals to increase and conserve supplies of energy.

On Aug. 1, the House threw up its hands and went home with the energy bill still the pending business. The debate broke down over oil pricing and finally sputtered to a stop over a three-tier pricing system. After adopting the system, some members thought better of the idea and offered an amendment to undo its prior action. When Congress comes back Sept. 3, it will vote on striking that language from the bill.

Energy is a hydra-headed creature. While the House was debating its policy act, the Senate was passing two separate bills that will affect how we explore and develop the oil and gas resources of the Outer Continental Shelf in the next few years. This is basic to the energy problem but not as visible as the price you will pay for gasoline next month.

The only energy story that got much attention was the congressional extension of oil price controls for six months and President Ford's opposition. There will be a veto — and an attempt to override — followed by higher gas prices.

In the midst of all this, the Senate approved a $4 billion bill for the energy research agency which will finance nuclear programs in the year ahead and research on fossil energy, solar energy, geothermal energy and even wind and tidal power.

No one can say Congress isn't active in the energy field but there may be too many players and too many balls in the air to give the Capitol an advantage over the White House.

Judging from what has happened in the past seven months, there's little prospect that anyone can keep an eye on the game when it resumes in September, except to identify the losers.

Shapp should face reality

It appears that Gov. Milton J. Shapp's foray into the political testing grounds of New England has been less than a headline-grabbing success. He has just spent two weeks feeling out his chances for the Democratic presidential nomination, and at least publicly has come up empty-handed. From sparse media reports, his reception was cordial, but far from enthusiastic, and some of the folks even had trouble with his name.

Now we think it's time for Gov. Shapp to face up to reality: forget about the White House and concentrate on the problems of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, problems which he inherited and some of which he helped to create in one way or another.

Pennsylvania set a record for unemployment last month. Pennsylvania is facing fiscal problems of its own. The state is still trying to recover from a mind-boggling strike by the state's employees' unions, the first ever in the history of the Commonwealth. The Governor has a working relationship with a General Assembly which is less than perfect, and in the long run doesn't do any of the taxpayers any good.

And on top of everything else, Shapp is in a bit of personal trouble.

Instead of cavorting about New England for two weeks, the time could have been better spent by Shapp in preparing his testimony for the federal grand jury which will be making inquiries about a $20,000 contribution during his first successful race for governor in 1970. The unreported contribution was given by Beaver County engineer Michael Baker Jr., who has been awarded millions of dollars worth of state business.

The grand jury meets in Pittsburgh on Oct. 7. On that same day on Shapp's agenda, he is scheduled to address the National Conference of State Legislators in Philadelphia. It has been opined that Shapp may use his speech before the legislative conference to officially announce his presidential candidacy. The conference will be attended by legislators from throughout the country, and covered by some of the nation's top political writers.

We hope two things will happen on Oct. 7. Shapp will be able to satisfy the federal grand jury with honest answers, and later in the day, announce his decision not to run away from problems in his own backyard.

Some good news

A question often directed at people who are in the business of gathering news is, "Why don't you print more good news, happy news, instead of all the trouble in the world?"

The sad-but-true answer to that is simply this: There often is not a lot of happy news to report. For the most part, people who perform good deeds don't seek public notoriety for their actions. They would just as soon go about their business quietly, and in many cases, anonymously.

One group that does, however, seem to seek publicity for doing good is composed of several area children who each summer stage backyard Carnivals Against Dystrophy, which benefit the special camping program of the Muscular Dystrophy Assn.

The MDA's carnivals throughout the country raised $1,462,735 last year. Not a bad job for kids, most of whom are in their pre-teen years.

To the area's children who have staged these in the past, and will conduct them in the future, a special thanks from the community.

Nicaragua's Somoza, greediest grabber in the world

WASHINGTON — The world's greediest ruler is Anastasio Somoza, the pot-bellied potentate who runs Nicaragua as if it were his private estate.

This is no casual observation; we have spent months making the selection. After a thorough study of the available evidence, we nominate Somoza as the most grasping of the world's great grabbers.

Through his family and his flunkies, he controls every profitable industry, institution and service in Nicaragua. Directly or indirectly, he owns farms, factories, banks, newspapers, radio-TV stations, ships, planes, and you-name-it.

He produces much of the food his people eat, the cigarettes they smoke, the coffee they drink, the sugar they put in their coffee, and even the ice cubes they use to cool their drinks.

He literally bleeds his people and sells the plasma for profit. He even sells his troops the boots they march in.

When a Managua housewife drops a coin in a laundromat or when a motorist buys time on a parking meter, Somoza gets his cut. He owns the laundromats and operates the parking meters.

Almost everyone in Nicaragua with the wherewithal drives a Mercedes-Benz, because the Somoza family owns the Mercedes-Benz franchise.

The police patrol the streets of Managua in Mercedes-Benz cars. The city even uses Mercedes-Benz trucks to collect the garbage.

Jack Anderson
With Les Whitten

As the Big Banana in this little banana republic, Somoza not only grows bananas but produces the cardboard boxes they are shipped in. Then they are loaded, invariably, aboard cargo vessels of his shipping line.

Not satisfied with the millions he squeezes out of his own countrymen, he also fleeces the U.S. taxpayers. Millions of dollars in U.S. aid are piped into Nicaragua every year. Somoza has developed a dozen ways to siphon a generous share into his own pocket.

All of this has made him one of the world's wealthiest men, with millions stashed in American banks, Swiss banks and other financial institutions. In addition, our sources estimate his commercial investments outside Nicaragua run into the hundreds of millions.

Yet while Somoza has been accumulating most of the wealth in his country, his dirt-poor subjects live in ramshackle shacks and earn an average wage of about 30 cents an hour.

We have carefully documented Somoza's holdings, which are hidden in a financial maze.

He controls many enterprises through front men, whom he manipulates like the pieces in a monopoly game. His intricate, intertwined financial empire can be traced through Nicaraguan documents, which we have translated from the original Spanish. The U.S. government has also compiled a secret economic profile of Somoza. We have been able to compare our information from Nicaragua with these findings.

Of course, Somoza doesn't deserve the full credit for amassing vast fortune. He got an excellent start from his father, who seized power in 1936 and began helping himself to the property of others.

The elder Somoza usually observed a certain legal formality. He acquired property through dispossession and forced sales. He also filed claims for government land and expropriated the possessions of German nationals during World War II.

For years, the old dictator got free farm labor by putting his farm hands on the payroll of the government-owned Nicaraguan Pacific Railroad. Much of his land was also cleared, drained and irrigated with heavy machinery belonging to the Ministry of Public Works.

Through two main companies, Compania Agropecuaria and Sucesores del General Somoza, the Somoza family now owns over 50 per cent of the private property in Nicaragua, including 30 per cent of the prime farmland.

Their real estate portfolio includes coffee, cacao, tobacco, banana, sugar cane and pineapple plantations; corn, bean, rice, sorghum, sesame, fruit and vegetable farms; and vast grazing land for cattle.

The Somoza family croplands are approximately equal in size to the entire neighboring republic of El Salvador. Indeed, there doesn't seem to be room in Nicaragua for all the Somoza farmland. The family also owns huge farms in Guatemala, Costa Rica and El Salvador.

Two enormous spreads on the Costa Rican border are used, according to our sources, to move cattle illegally between two countries. And on his Costa Rican plantations, the Nicaraguan dictator actually has built military airports and barracks for his own troops.

In Managua, the family owns hundreds of properties. Somoza owns the building, for example, which houses the luxurious Managua Intercontinental Hotel. He has a quarter interest in the hotel itself, a small gratuity he received for providing the Intercontinental chain with choice land and tax concessions.

The hotel was built, incidentally, with $1.9 million guaranteed by the U.S. government's Overseas Private Investment Corporation.

The full story of Somoza's feudal, financial empire is mind-boggling. It will take additional columns to tell it all.

Footnote: We attempted to reach Nicaraguan embassy officials for any comments or rebuttals they might wish to offer. Ambassador Sevilla-Sacasa, who also happens to be Somoza's brother-in-law, was out of the country for several weeks. Not a single embassy officer was available to talk to us, we were told.

The Money Book: The real cost of car ownership

(Fifteenth of 21 columns)

How much does your car cost you to own and operate?

Here are facts and guidelines to use in making your own personal calculations:

Car ownership costs are basically of two kinds: fixed costs, which are independent of the amount of driving you do; and flexible, variable costs — or operating costs — which depend on the number of miles you drive your car. Both depend on the type of car (and trimmings) you buy in the first place. You can figure the real cost, per mile, of running your car by dividing your total fixed and flexible costs by the total number of miles you drive over any period of time you choose.

Here are your fixed costs:

Depreciation, or the amount of value a car loses as it becomes older: As a rough guide, a car depreciates by 30 per cent of its value during the first year you own it; 18 per cent the second; 14 per cent the third; 11 per cent the fourth; 8 per cent the fifth; 6 per cent the sixth; 5 per cent the seventh; and about 2 per cent each year thereafter. Some small imports, though, depreciate only 25 per cent in their first two years.

For non-mathematicians probably the easiest way to find out how much your car actually has depreciated is to look up its wholesale value in the National Automobile Dealers Association's Used Car Guide. Simply subtract the figure you find in this guide from the price you paid for your car.

Insurance: These costs may range from less than $100 a year for a good driver of an inexpensive car to $600 or more a year for a young, high-risk driver of an expensive car in a big city.

Other fixed costs: registration; purchase taxes (including sales taxes); property taxes; financing costs; garaging costs.

Your variable costs include: gas and oil; maintenance; repairs; accessories and parts; tires; tolls and parking expenses.

If you attach a dollars-and-cents figure to each of these categories of car ownership costs,

I'll wager that the total will astound you.

Let's say you are deliberating over what size car to buy. You really need a standard-size car for your size family but don't know how much more it would cost in terms of gas, oil, etc., than a compact or subcompact.

Here is a rundown on the various costs of each size car over a 10-year life of the car by the Federal Highway Administration. The comparisons are for the 1974 models.

EXPENSE	STANDARD	COMPACT	SUBCOMPACT

Stories behind words

Varsity

In a discussion of intercollegiate or interschool athletics, the word "varsity" is apt to arise. A school may have several squads or teams in one sport, but the one chosen to represent the school in competition with another is called the "varsity."

"Varsity" is a shortened form of "university," and accordingly is written by the British, who originated it, with an apostrophe ("varsity").

Many Americans might wonder why "varsity" is spelled and pronounced with an "a" instead of an "e," since it is short for "university." "Varsity" is a phonetic spelling. The British pronounce some words containing "er" with an "ar" sound. For example, "clerk" for "clerk" and "university" for "university."

Demos pick New York for national convention

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Democratic convention site selection committee has all but officially chosen New York City as the location of its 1976 National Convention, a high ranking party source said Tuesday.

The source, closely associated with the committee, said an unofficial poll of the group's 20 members found more than half intending to vote for New York over Los Angeles when the committee meets next Wednesday in Washington.

Only a few loose ends remain to be ironed out with New York City officials, the source said.

Reached in Albany, N.Y., however, Patrick Cunningham, New York State Democratic chairman and head of the site committee, said it was "absolutely untrue" that a decision, unofficial or otherwise, had been made.

He said representatives of both cities, as well as the committee staff, would make final presentations next week in Washington. Asked if the committee would vote that day, Cunningham replied: "Yes, there will be a vote on Aug. 27."

In Washington, a spokesman for the Democratic National Committee also insisted no decision had been made, saying "many things are still up in the air."

Several previously uncommitted committee members decided in favor of New York after receiving assurances from local union leaders that — barring the unexpected — there would be labor peace when the convention opens next July 12, the source said.

Most committee members, according to the source, were satisfied New York would solve its fiscal problems by the time of the convention and would be able to provide the police and other services necessary.

The committee earlier had narrowed down the field to New York and Los Angeles from a list of contenders which included New Orleans, Miami Beach and others.

The source, however, said the final presentations were being conducted simply "pro forma" and that Los Angeles would still be considered an alternative site, should New York's financial problems unexpectedly lead to bankruptcy in the coming months.

A spokesman for Madison Square Garden, where the convention would be held, said no legal documents had yet been signed but "We are operating under the assumption the convention will be here."

A minority group of committee members, the source said, continued to oppose the selection of New York, principally because of the fear that the city's problems would become too great an issue at the convention. But the majority preferred New York because of its hotel space, transportation and proximity to Washington, the source said.

More important, according to some insiders, is the reported backing of Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss and the influence of New York Gov. Hugh Carey and Mayor Abraham Beame.

Angola unsafe for foreigners

LUANDA, Angola (UPI) — The American mission warned all English-speaking residents Tuesday to get out of Angola because of fears that fighting among black Angolan liberation movements would spread.

American consul general Thomas F. Killoran circulated the warning among an estimated 100 Americans, Britons and Canadians. When the British consulate closed down last month, the foreign office in London asked Killoran to handle the affairs of Britons and Commonwealth citizens still in Angola.

The American warning said: "The State Department, in a strongly worded warning, advises all U.S., Canadian and British residents to leave Angola as soon as possible as neither the U.S. nor Portugal have the means to guarantee their safety, due to the belief that the conflict is expected to generalize."

Most foreigners left Angola last month by special airlifts to London and Paris.

Heavy fighting for control of Angola's major harbor, Lobito, continued Tuesday, according to a Portuguese army spokesman. He said the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola, which already holds Luanda, is defending the harbor against attacks by two rival nationalist groups.

The National Front for the Liberation of Angola which receives support from Zaire, and the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, supplied with arms by Zambia, have joined forces to try to drive the Soviet-armed Popular Movement from Lobito.

The town's civilian population sought shelter at the Portuguese army barracks and military sources said the 400-man garrison had tried to intervene to cool the five days of fighting.

Last month the Popular Movement forced the National Union and the Front out of Luanda and the three-party transitional government collapsed.

The Union and the Front have thrown a wide army cordon around the capital, cutting off its supplies of fresh food. The city's 650,000 black and white residents are also short of fuel.

African liberators solicited

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (UPI) — Ugandan President Idi Amin called Tuesday for volunteers to form an African black liberation army that would invade white-ruled South Africa and Rhodesia.

He accused African leaders of too much talk and not enough action in raising the all-African army.

"There has been a lot of talk concerning an African High Command," he said. "Have we implemented this decision?"

Amin, who became chairman of the Organization of African Unity three weeks ago, told an OAU staff meeting at the organization's headquarters in Addis Ababa that all such talk has come to nothing so far.

"And how many enemies does black Africa have now? Black Africa has only two, South Africa and Rhodesia."

Amin said he might contact a few countries about forming the "African Liberation Army." It was not immediately known which countries Amin planned to contact.

"Such an army was never formed because of the objections of those countries not prepared to fight," the Ugandan leader said.

"Black Africa wants only those people who are completely prepared to volunteer for the purpose of invading South Africa."

"For the rest, black Africa thanks them for their moral and political support," he said.

Amin arrived in the Ethiopian capital Monday for a three-day official visit. He said his country wanted closer ties with Ethiopia's provisional military government, especially in the field of military cooperation.

He also said one of the main reasons he went to Addis Ababa was to find ways of uniting the three warring nationalist groups in Angola, he said.

New dimensions in separates by Villager and Queen Casuals in fantastic new shades like plum, avocado, bittersweet, and olive green . . . beautiful new fall knit pants suits and shirtdresses by Butte; luxurious cotton peasant skirts with matching scarves; suede coats, lavishly trimmed with fur; and the wonder of what has happened to corduroy . . . so soft and supple it looks for all the world like velvet or suede, in shirtdresses, jumpers, slacks and blazers. They applauded the "big look" love-to-snuggle-in sweaters in stripes and solids; and they "oohed and aahed" over the Pendletons, particularly the glen plaid suit in rust and brown modeled by Rosemary Levy, with the handsomest fedora of rust felt as the "topper." (Irma Reinhardt's sensational millinery for fall makes you want to wear a hat again!) The ladies also agreed that nothing makes you feel more like a "star" than a formal gown, and our dress department looks like the wardrobe room at MGM with slinky jerseys, art nouveau prints and floaty chiffons!

I guess you can tell we ARE looking forward to fall, and the "BIG THINGS" that are happening at the store! Be alerted! We are planning the first Home Decorating Workshop in conjunction with Seventeen who have now extended their fashion emphasis to your home! # 'Operation Swap' a success

By STAN FEDERMAN
Dow Jones-Orfaway News
PORTLAND, Ore. — An elderly Portland woman stepped out of an airliner in Sacramento, Calif., some weeks back, lifted her face to the warm sunshine and said that she felt like "busting out and crying."

She had long been ill. She had seldom ventured more than a block or two from the public-housing project where she lived in Portland, and yet she was arriving in California for her first vacation in many years — a trip made possible by a government-financed program informally called "Operation Swap."

Under the program, the Portland woman exchanged bed and board with a public-housing tenant from Sacramento, and the government helped pay the travel fare for what she described as "10 glorious days in California."

Operation Swap is the vacation residential exchange program, a nationwide experimental effort directed by the International Center for Social Gerontology, a private, nonprofit organization in Washington, D.C. The center developed the program with a $186,000 grant from the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare's Administration on Aging.

Portland and Seattle formed one of the 14 pairs of cities involved in the test of Operation Swap over the past year: 25 to 40 persons took part in each exchange. Local public-housing officials and volunteer groups planned and administered the exchanges.

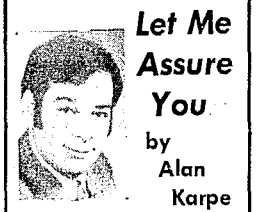

Some of the vacationers were a little apprehensive about how their apartments and possessions would be cared for by visitors, but the remarks of the Portland travelers indicate they had nothing to worry about.

Mrs. Lillian Parsons says that she found her apartment "sparkling" when she returned from California. "I think the person who lived in it put polish on everything."

Concern about strain, fatigue, and illness also vanished for the 15 Portland participants. Most said they had the time of their lives, and one woman commented, "I climbed stairs I never thought I could climb."

Housing officials in Portland have asked government authorities to provide funds to enlarge the program because the first exchange was so successful.

"We all were so delighted for our vacationers," says Ruth Drurey, the housing authority's director resident services.

Operation Identification, in New York City, has halved the burglary rate in households enrolled in the program. Here's how it works:

Householder borrows electric etching tool from local police precinct, plus an inventory sheet. Each valuable is etched with the owner's social security number; the inventory is kept at home (or in safe deposit box).

Tool is returned to police, along with two cards listing the householder's name, social security number and phone number. One card stays in the local precinct; the other goes to central Stolen Property Inquiry Section.

Householder gets decals for doors and windows that say: "We have joined Operation Identification. All items of value on these premises have been marked for ready identification by the New York City Police Department."

Decal, they say, is the real deterrent. Of 29,000 households enrolled, only 217 have been burglarized. And there, Operation Identification has facilitated arrests and return of property. Other communities have used this plan effectively, too.

Lid shortage won't go away

By DAVID M. ELSNER
Dow Jones — Offaway News
Muncie, Ind. — Dear Sir:

This letter is entirely intended to make you feel lousy. That is how I seem to feel so I thought you should too.

Your company lied to me and many others. The lady who wrote answering my first letter lied and said you were making canning lids seven days a week, three shifts a day. What a laugh. I believed her.

I want you to know that as long as I live I'll never buy another canning jar.

(signed) Goldie A. Moury
Mrs. Moury, a housewife from Acme, Pa., is talking about The Great Mason-Jar Lid Shortage of 1975. Letters like hers, now running at the rate of about 4,000 a week, have made the Ball Corp. people here pretty upset.

"Everyone but everyone is convinced we're screwing them," sighs Vern Schranz, Ball's director of public relations. "No matter what we say, people don't believe us."

At the center of all of the fuss is a round tin-plate disc with an airtight gasket that tightly seals the mouth of a canning jar. A new lid must be used each time a home canner "puts up" fruits or vegetables. After one use a lid becomes distorted. If an airtight lid isn't used, harmful bacteria can spoil the food.

Although rumors of dark plots abound, officials of Ball and other home-canning equipment makers say the present shortage has been caused by a boom in home-gardening activity and by a "shortage psychology" that has led to widespread hoarding.

Lids were in somewhat tight supply over the past two years because of a tin-plate shortage, Ball says, and this year home canners snapped up all available supplies early, even though there should have been enough to go around.

"People have walked out with them by the armload," confirms the manager of an Eagle Store in Arlington Heights, Ill., a suburb of Chicago. "A little while ago 60 cases went inside of two hours."

The manufacturers' explanations haven't been universally accepted. Consumers charge that Ball and the Kerr Glass Manufacturing Co. of Los Angeles, which together comprise about 90 per cent of the nation's home-canning industry, have deliberately under produced jar lids in order to force consumers to purchase more for about $3 a dozen, the lids for about 39 cents a dozen.

Federal Trade Commission (FTC) investigators also are tracking down many rumors of collusion and worse. Most appear unfounded but "show the hysterical nature of the situation," one investigator says.

For example, a congressional aide tells of unscrupulous merchants importing Canadian lids that don't fit American-made jars. A major fruit canner is said to have purchased a large quantity of lids in order to keep them off the market and force the purchase of its own products.

The buyer for a large midwestern grocery wholesaler says he's heard of manufacturers' warehouses "just chockful" of extra lids. (A tour through Ball's Muncie warehouse fails to reveal any.)

An over-all FTC investigation of the home-canning industry isn't expected to find any wrongdoing on the part of the lid makers, nor any widespread holdbacks by distributors in an effort to increase prices.

One FTC source says, however, that he suspects that millions of lids were set aside for the complete jar-and-lid sets. Those sets didn't sell as well as expected, mainly because a number of new glass-jar companies jumped into the market and oversaturated it, he says. Many of the jar-and-lid sets are sitting unsold in warehouses and on grocery shelves.

The lid shortage is expected to worsen in the coming weeks as tomatoes, apples, and peaches are picked — despite the fact that manufacturers estimate they will have produced 1.6 billion lids by the end of the year, or about 70 for each of America's estimated 26 million "canning" families. "It's just like they're running them into the Pacific and dumping them," says a Kerr official.

Both Ball and Kerr are stepping up lid production, but that probably won't ease the immediate situation. "There will be a glut of these things on the market next year," predicts an FTC official, "but things will be pretty tight until then."

Teenage mothers face many risks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Saying teen-agers tend to believe they cannot become pregnant easily, a survey revealed today that six out of every 10 teen-aged mothers are unmarried or marry about the time of giving birth.

"Teen-age pregnancy is largely the result of non-use or sporadic use of contraceptives," Cynthia Green and Susan Lowe said in an article in Zero Population Growth's publication National Reporter.

"Teen-agers tend to believe they cannot become pregnant easily. Of those who did not use contraception at last intercourse, 56 per cent stated they were too young to get pregnant, had sex too infrequently to get pregnant or had intercourse at the wrong time of the month."

The authors based their conclusions on statistics from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, and a survey by the Census Bureau.

Teen-aged girls account for one of every five births in the United States and one in 10 teen-agers has a baby, the survey showed. About four in 10 teen-aged mothers are married, three are unmarried and three marry about the time of giving birth, the authors said.

It said births to girls under 15 increased 8 per cent, from 9,500 to 10,900, in a two-year period 1971-73. Births to women aged 15 to 19 increased from 194,100 to 204,900 in the same period.

"Increased public concern over teen-age pregnancy may be attributed to the increasing proportion of teen-age births in relation to total births and to the rising proportion of out-of-wedlock births among teen-agers," they said.

Boston area bicycle thefts have new twist

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — A Cambridge girl locked her bicycle to an outside metal armistist using a supposedly fool-proof "metal lock, but thieves ripped off her bike by acksawing through the bannister.

Joel Weingarten, a junior at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has now started a bicycle Hotline in an effort to alert such thefts.

"Bike thefts have taken on a new dimension," he said. Gangs are mugging people in road daylight and taking their bikes. And people are breaking into households just to steal bicycles. They leave jewelry and stereo equipment."

The quick turnover value of bicycles, few of which are registered, is the primary reason for their theft. A $150 bicycle can be turned over quickly for $50 only hours after the theft. Police have no centralized system to catch a bike sent to another town.

"This area is a bike thief's mecca," Cambridge Police Chief Francis Pisani said, referring to the great number of college students riding the two-wheelers.

Problem on rise here

STROUDSBURG — In this area most bicycle thefts occur during the summer. Sgt. C. Robert Cooke of the Stroud Township Police Dept. says that there are about 12 reports of thefts on his books now. The department has six unclaimed bicycles on hand.

Sometimes thieves will disassemble the bikes and create new ones from the assorted parts. Some bikes are simply borrowed and abandoned by people who are too tired to talk to their destinations, says Sgt. Cooke.

tion system for bicycles, but Stroudsburg does. Chief John Beaudin credits the system with reducing the number of thefts. Some of those stolen are repaired and repainted.

The most popular targets, of course, are the expensive 10-speed models.

Mrs. Margaret Mannhaupt of the East Stroudsburg Police Department reports an increase in thefts for 1975. The total value of bicycles stolen in 1974 was $4,497. Through July of this year there have been 40 bicycle thefts reported, with a value of $3,327.

GOLDEN WEDDING — Mr. and Mrs. George Halterman, East Stroudsburg R.D. 4, celebrated their golden wedding recently with an open house and buffet dinner at the Analomink fire hall. The event was planned by their children: Mr. and Mrs. Garrett Halterman, Mr. and Mrs. Marland Halterman, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Halterman, Mr. and Mrs. Duane Tallada, and Mr. and Mrs. Alan Decker. About 150 guests congratulated the couple.

Diets

This is the most diet-conscious country in the entire world and frankly, it's getting on my nerves.

I'm sick to death of pouring one calorie soft drinks over my ice cream, using imitation mayonnaise in my potato salad, and ruining a perfectly good gravy sandwich by pouring it between two slices of diet bread.

You might as well know this column was triggered by a trip to the shopping center yesterday in search of End-of-the-Month bargains. You know what was left on the racks? Size 3s. You and I both know why size 3s do not move. There is no such thing as a size 3. Think about it. Have you ever seen a size 3 over eight years old?

"Thin" is a manufactured product of the United States, which has made us the laughingstock of the entire world.

You have to tour Europe and view firsthand the subjects of their priceless art treasures to realize this.

On a recent tour, I stood for 21 days looking up at ceilings with nude women floating around and I didn't see a Weight Watcher in the entire bunch. I saw stomachs that looked like canopies, legs with muscles to support a dry dock, arms like the Village Smithy and lumpy little bodies that would stamp out one-size-fits-all forever!

I figured out it would take 15 Audrey Hepburns, eight Jennifer O'Neills and five Angie Dickinsons to fill up a canvas that took Leonardo da Vinci only one model to fill.

I also figured out that as models, Audrey, Jennifer and Angie would have starved to death... rather finished starving to death during the Renaissance.

No, I'm afraid "thin" is a product of the New World which made its appearance at the turn of the 17th century when artists figured a fat pilgrim did not show suffering. Our art has glorified the thin

Hasn't come back

By Jean Adams

AGAIN? (Q.) About four months ago Terry said he wanted to break up because we weren't getting along. He was mistaken. We were getting along great. But I didn't want to make trouble, so I let him go.

When he said good-by he almost cried, and he said, "There'll always be a place in my heart for you."

I know he was mixed up then. Now I think he has his head straightened out. But he hasn't said anything about coming back to me. I know it would be hard for him to come back to me but I believe he wants to.

He isn't going out with anyone else. I'm not either. Should I say something to him, and if so what?

Marking Time in Maine

(A.) You could be mistaken now. But you certainly seem to have been understanding with Terry. I believe he should at least be understanding if you called him and told him you'd be glad to have him come over and talk about old times.

AFTER THE PROM: (Q.) Donnie invited me to his prom and we have gone out together a few times since then. I want

Amnesty asked

RIDGECREST, N.C. (UPI) — A Southern Baptist seminary professor, Prof. Henlee H. Barnett, of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, has called on President Ford to grant universal and unconditional amnesty to Vietnam war opponents and said the government "has not shown the same kind of compassion toward our own children" as it had the Vietnamese refugees.

(A.) Your mother knows that in doing almost anything the second time is easier than the first, and the third easier still. Soon you lose count. This is true whether what you are doing is good or bad.

She wanted to make an impression on you. She overdid it, but I believe her heart was in the right place.

You can convince her by really not doing it again — ever.

(Write to Jean Adams, Ph.D., in care of The Pocono Record, P.O. Box 2402, Housatonic, Texas 77001. Every letter is read, but because of the great number received, Dr. Adams cannot send personal answers.)

Ann Landers

Small businessmen

Dear Ann Landers: I'd like to ask the American people a few questions. It's a matter of economic survival to me as well as millions of other "little people" who have small stores.

Who do you ask to cash your checks? Who do you ask for credit when things are tight? Who do you ask to take ads for your organizations, yearbooks and programs? Who do you ask for contributions for your church suppers, raffles, etc? Who do you call after hours when you need a special item? Who do you ask to put up your posters for special events?

It's your local, hometown small businessman. After all, he's your friend, your neighbor. But when you want to make a purchase, how often do you drive past his place of business and go to a giant store thinking you might save a few cents, without giving your local merchant a chance or even comparing his prices?

We are competitive with the biggest stores price-wise and our services are often better. But we can't survive much longer. When we go, you'll miss us.

Too Many To Name

Dear Too Many: Your letter reflects one of the major social and economic problems of our times. It's becoming more and more difficult for the small, independent businessman to survive. I wish I knew the answer.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 5-11 and my husband is 6-4. We have been married for five years and would love to have a child. The problem: we are both terrified that he (or she) would be abnormally tall.

Both of us suffered horrible ridicule because we were the tallest in our classes. We'd hate to bring a child into the world who stands a good chance of going through the same agony. You can't imagine the emotional burden. Please advise.

The Giraffes

Dear G's: I don't need to "imagine" the burden. My twin sister and I HAD the burden. We were the shortest ones in our class from kindergarten on. But it didn't bother us in the least — it just motivated us to try to be "tall" in other ways.

My advice is go ahead and have a child. He (or she) might inherit the genes of your Uncle Elmer or Aunt Hilda who were the runts of the litter. One can never predict the outcome in the game of genetic roulette.

Confused about what's right and what's wrong in today's "new morality"? You're not alone. If you want honest, down-to-earth information on your sex questions, read Ann Landers' new booklet, "High School Sex And How To Deal With It — A Guide For Teens And Their Parents." Send 50 cents in coin plus a long-stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Corporations buy idea that consumers have rights

By MARY LEONARD
Dow Jones-Offaway News
MINNEAPOLIS — Their motives may not be altruistic, and their goal of stimulating sales in these hard times is clear. Even so, many corporate leaders are accepting the notion that good consumerism is good business.

"The consumer has the right to be heard," James McFarland, General Mills' board chairman, recently told an audience of corporate consumer affairs professionals here, "and we're bending over backward to listen."

It may be industry's consumer-affairs specialists, business' in-house consumer advocates, who are doing the real bending.

Many of them are newcomers to consumer-relations departments, complaint-handling data banks, and corporate board rooms. Most of them are still learning that good consumerism is hard to define and often even harder to turn into corporate policy.

"My first problem is determining what is in the best interest of the average consumer," says Hope Smith, consumer advocate in Swift & Co.'s office of public responsibility. "The second is persuading men who know their business to accept consumer-oriented programs."

In the last five years at least, 350 businesses, most of them sizable and well-known, have established corporate-level consumer or customer-affairs departments, according to the Conference Board, a New York City research organization. Corporate vice presidents head 17 per cent of those departments and 60 per cent of all consumer professionals say they have direct access to presidents and other management executives. The theory is that responsible yet insulated businessmen need information, including criticism, from customers and consumer watchdogs. In practice, the advice they get isn't always needed.

"Companies see consumerism as 'something we should be doing' but not as something to be taken all that seriously," says Carol Tucker Foreman, executive director of the Consumer Federation of America. "I don't believe that many, if any, consumer-affairs professionals are powerful enough to influence corporate or public policy."

Some consumer professionals undeniably have made accomplishments. Esther Petersen, president of the National Consumers League and consumer advisor for Giant Food Inc., in Washington, D.C., initiated grocery unit pricing, open dating, and nutritional and ingredient labeling.

She helped establish programs for testing toys, recycling paper products, and identifying chemicals in cosmetics and household products.

The Whirlpool Corp.'s consumer-affairs office, directed by corporate vice president Stephen Upton, led the way for other appliance manufacturers by rewriting its warranty in layman's language. Whirlpool also was the first company to set up a 24-hour toll-free telephone system for handling customers' questions and complaints.

Different companies admittedly accept different levels of social responsibility and different definitions of "consumer professional." Ms. Smith sees herself as independent, corporate ombudsman concerned with broad reviews of corporate policies toward product safety, design, advertising, warranties and nutrition.

But Doris Pooton, manager of consumer response for General Mills, Inc., in Minneapolis, sees herself as a liaison between and representative of both the company and the consumer, an employee who can focus simultaneously on consumer problems and corporate profits. Her primary responsibility is to handle complaints — General Mills gets literally millions of them every year — quickly, satisfactorily, and cordially.

The overwhelming majority in the society of consumer affairs professionals in business, the 500-member group organized by Ms. Pooton and others in 1973, shares that perspective and identifies with that job description. Three-fourths of all consumer-affairs personnel, reports the conference board, are in charge of resolving complaints, answering correspondence, and developing complaint-handling procedures. "More than 300 corporations, representing three-fourths of all major U.S. manufacturers, have consumer-affairs departments, and that is a tremendous beginning," says E. Patrick McGuire, director of the Conference Board report on consumer professionals. "In terms of what these and other companies can and need to do, we're only a small way down the road."

Lester Coleman, M.D.

Burden of weight

Why do intelligent people simply refuse to admit that 65 extra pounds is a dangerous burden to their hearts? My husband is one of those who can't be convinced.

Mrs. T.H., Ark.

Dear Mrs. H.:

A psychiatrist may entertain the complex reason of the death wish to explain such problems. Perhaps it does exist, yet I am more convinced that there are even intelligent people who refuse to recognize the extra load those 65 pounds are putting on their hearts.

It takes no particular brilliance to appreciate the fact that pounds of fat around the heart, blood vessels, liver and lungs do an injustice to the wonderful functioning of these organs.

Doctors are amazed that patients who cannot give up tobacco, excess alcohol and who cannot learn to modify emotional stress find they can do so after they have had their first heart attack.

Hard driving, unreasonable people seem to be miraculously converted into angels once they have been stricken by coronary heart disease.

They quickly learn that they are expendable in their businesses and that tobacco, alcohol and dietary excesses can be controlled.

Perhaps the psychiatrist is correct when he speaks about the death wish and that people tempt their fates, tottering on the brink of destruction before readjusting their patterns of living.

It falls within the province of the physician to bring a greater awareness to people like your husband of the need for re-evaluation of his total health picture.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH . . . The dinner table should be a good setting for relaxation. Eating periods should be free of emotional tension.

Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — The recent tragic deaths of three offspring of showbiz celebrities, coming so close together, set off speculation about the ordeal sons and daughters of the stars have to endure. Yet on the whole, most children of the famous adjust to the problems just as children in any walk of life do. They cope with their struggles of identity, and they make their way.

We talked with Noah Beery (who's dropped the Jr.). Noah is the son of oldtime movie star Noah Beery and the nephew of the even more famous Wallace Beery. The younger Noah has made his own name in many films, but more than that he has made his own life regardless of his noted forebears.

"Very little has been written about the 'sons of the film pioneers,' but the fact is that, taking the sons and daughters collectively, the offspring of motion picture celebrities add up to a very respectable number of outstanding personalities who are making it on their own.

"In my own case, I not only am one of that number but also am fortunate to have been impelled by a triple family influence when I made my film debut at the age of four back in 1920 with my father, Noah Beery Sr., in 'The Mark of Zorro.' My mother also was an actress, appearing with Dad on the stage, while my uncle Wallace has become one of the screen immortals.

"So I rank right up there with the Lucille Ball-Desi Arnaz progeny, the Ozzie Nelsons, the Carter DeHavens and the select few other show business families boasting professional offspring of professional teams.

"With my current role as Bo Svenson's co-star in the Bing Crosby Productions 'Part 2 Walking Tall,' I have appeared in more than 100 feature motion pictures including the original 'Walking Tall,' which has become one of the all-time big grossers in movie history.

"Working with such manly stars as John Wayne, Gary Cooper, Victor McLaglen, James Stewart, Cary Grant, Glenn Ford, Pat O'Brien and many others also has been an important stimulus, as well as invaluable training, in advancing my career.

"Nevertheless there are special hurdles in the path of a son following in his father's footsteps, especially if he should try to equal or surpass the accomplishments of an illustrious parent — which I definitely have not tried to do.

"First of all, the big stars of the past have created legends that not only are hard to top but keep growing and sometimes even become brighter as time goes by. This is particularly true of the one-of-a-kind personalities such as John Wayne, Douglas Fairbanks, Bing Crosby, John Barrymore, Frank Sinatra, Lon Chaney, John Carradine and quite a few others. All have offspring who are doing quite well, a real credit to their parents, but their fathers had something special, an individual spark or flair, that was peculiarly their own. Nobody could duplicate it.

"Furthermore, from a sentimental standpoint, it may be just as well that the offspring do not outshine their parents, as it could destroy some cherished legends. The public likes to hold on to its fond memories. They are an endless topic of conversation, discussion and incentive to newcomers.

"It's also interesting that not all sons and daughters of stars are inclined to adopt the same careers chosen by their parents. For instance, while Patrick Wayne is following his father as an actor, John's other son, Michael, picked the executive end of the business. Crosby's son Gary has gone in for acting, but musically inclined Harry took college courses in music theory and harmony with songwriting as his objective.

"Alan Ladd Jr., son of Alan Ladd and Sue Carol, has become a production executive. Jack Haley Jr. is a producer. Douglas Fairbanks Jr. turned mainly to business after an acting career. And don't forget William Hopper, whose actress mother became a Hollywood columnist.

"On the distaff side, an outstanding personality is Liza Minnelli, daughter of Judy Garland and film director Vincente Minnelli. Liza seems well on her way to winning her own pinnacle of fame.

"Then there are Marlo Thomas, Danny's daughter, who has made a big name in television; Geraldine Chaplin, Nancy Sinatra, Gloria DeHaven, and others. Obviously this is just a partial list.

"Many acting sons and daughters of acting parents also go in for roles similar to those played by their parents. I usually play western types even though I was born in New York and attended private schools and military academies in the East. Anyway, my appearance suggests outdoor characters — ranchers, cowboys, western frontier gunmen. Both my father and I liked outdoor life, and in the course of our travels we went fishing and hunting in most of the states."

Maybe there's a clue there. When parents and children not only subsist together but also do the things they enjoy together, perhaps the kids are more likely to grow up to live a fulfilling life whether they are born to the famous or to ordinary folks like yours and mine.

Parents ready battle over S-burg kindergarten setup

By JEFF WIDMER
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — Armed with petitions, a survey and the opinion of an educational expert, a group of parents tonight will try to convince the Stroudsburg Area School Board its schedule for kindergarten students is educationally "undesirable."

A group of nine parents have surveyed the parents of 273 kindergarten children by telephone and circulated petitions to support their request that a proposed kindergarten schedule be returned to its original form.

They also have a letter from the Pennsylvania Department of Education that terms the district's "quarter-on, quarter-off" kindergarten schedule "undesirable" and ineffective.

To save up to $30,000 in transportation costs, the board, on July 16, followed the recommendation of the administration and approved a schedule that will send half the kindergarten class to school full days for nine weeks. After that first "quarter," the second half of the students would attend full-day sessions for a second nine-week period.

At the July 16 board meeting, district Director of Elementary Schools Russell E. Treible said administrators had not yet decided what to do with the students during the remainder of the school year — from Jan. 26 to June 11.

Parents of kindergarten-age children say they want the program returned to the half-day, every day schedule that was in operation last year.

Although on July 21 a group of nine parents volunteered to drive their children to school to save the program and transportation costs, Mrs. Janet Rogers of Stroudsburg said Tuesday the group has changed its mind.

"We're asking for the standard, half-day program with transportation provided (by the district)," she said. "We're not only asking for it, but we see this as the only appropriate program."

Parents have claimed their children cannot tolerate a full day of school, and that their youngsters will sit idle for months at a time under the proposed "quarter-on, quarter-off" plan.

Treible said teachers ruled out full-day sessions every other day because they need continuous time with students.

To support their contention, Mrs. Rogers called the Pennsylvania Department of Education (PDE) Friday for its opinions and will present the results at tonight's meeting, scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in the group instruction room of Stroudsburg High School.

In a letter to Mrs. Rogers, Dr. Charlotte Garman, senior adviser on early childhood education to the PDE, said the alternating nine-week plan will not work to the children's advantage.

"I see no real merit in the quarterly plan in as much as children would tend to forget what they had learned and would have to have much recall every time they return to school."

"When children attend only one-half day they can do much more than when they attend a full day," Dr. Garman wrote.

Since district busing of kindergarteners is not mandated, it could be eliminated and the children would still get to school, she said.

Dr. Garman said she favors full-day kindergarten for 180 days, which would also provide the district with twice as much state reimbursements per child as it now receives.

Mrs. Rogers said parents do not expect the district to hire twice as many kindergarten teachers to educationally enhance the program, although she said her own research shows today's five-year-olds — possibly because of the stimulus of television — are capable of learning a great deal of material in a full day of school.

But if kindergarten is extended to a full day, the curriculum should be modified to provide something different from instruction in the afternoons, possibly singing or playing games, Mrs. Rogers commented.

Dr. Garman could not be contacted Tuesday for direct comments.

Mrs. William Schmidt, one of the original nine parents, strongly supported a return to half-day sessions. She said a telephone poll of 273 parents of kindergarten-age children shows 121 would prefer to drive their children to school for half-days, rather than let the district bus them for whole days.

She said about 75 preferred full day instruction every other day because they could not provide transportation.

"Only eight of the entire group favored the quarter system," she added.

When asked if many parents said they will withhold their children from kindergarten if the quarter system is adopted, Mrs. Schmidt said, "Oh, quite a few of them."

The parents agreed to do the survey for Treible to prove parents would provide their own transportation to save the half-day sessions, but Mrs. Schmidt conceded, "We didn't have a high enough percentage to provide our own transportation."

Parents also plan to present petitions with about 875 signatures to the board tonight, calling for a return to the traditional kindergarten program with the district providing the transportation.

Mrs. Janice Billick, who was in charge of the petitions, made the estimate and said the petitions had been circulated throughout the district during the past two weeks.

Land tax law fair, official contends

By FLIP DeLUCA
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — A district conservationist Tuesday said Act 319 will not cause drastic changes in tax rates for the average Monroe County homeowner as some people believe.

Lowell Edminster said the Monroe County Assessor's Office and the news media have been asserting that homeowner's property taxes will increase greatly to give preferential assessment to 271 applicants accounting for about 52,000 acres.

Edminster said it is not true and asked the Soil Conservation Service and other agencies to "give some positive statements to the commissioners."

Edminster said he "can't see how the homeowner can be taxed right out of the county. Most of the taxes come from buildings, commercial properties and businesses."

Under provisions of Act 319, lower assessment is offered to owners of 10 acres or more which falls into the categories of agricultural use, agricultural reserve or forest land reserve.

The county commissioners have 10 days in which to set the assessment rates. Edminster, representatives of the SCS, the forest service, extension service and Northampton County which is using Act 319, are to meet with the commissioners Friday to discuss the rates.

The commissioners met with county assessors last week and directed them to prepare recommendations on setting rates.

The state has recommended rates which assessors claim are too low for Monroe County and will push the tax burden onto average homeowners.

Representatives of Northampton County which uses preferential assessment under Act 319 as well as Act 515, told the SCS and other groups Tuesday that .1 of a mill of that county's tax rate has been transferred to the homeowner through preferential assessment.

About half of Northampton's 200,000 acres are included in the program. The rates used there range from $250 an acre for high producing farmland to $30 an acre for forest land, with an assessment ratio of 50 per cent.

Edminster suggested the SCS present assessment rates it recommends to the commissioners but John Bitzer, district forester, said he would be "uncomfortable" in recommending fixed figures without doing the groundwork to stand behind them.

Edminster suggested asking the county to adopt state recommended figures which place a lower value on farmland than earlier figures had. The figures for farmland range from $93 to $186 an acre compared to former figures of $149 to $297 an acre.

Eastburg wants to study regional sewerage plans

By HARRIET LEEDS
Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — Faced with the possibility of borough sewer rates nearly doubling if they go along with a regional sewer plan, the East Stroudsburg Borough Council Tuesday decided to have an independent study done.

Borough sewer engineers, Albright and Friel, will be directed to study the four alternatives presented in the recently-released General Authority of Monroe County plan and tell the borough which plan would be the best for it.

Fourth Ward Councilman W. Jack Wallie, who made the motion, said "Our obligation to the people of East Stroudsburg is number one and if we can cooperate (with the regional plan) we will."

Wallie said he felt "uneasy" that the borough does not have its own figures with which to compare the ones compiled by authority consultants VEP Associates — Elam & Popoff, Inc.

The General Authority last week recommended a sewerage plan as most feasible which would eliminate the existing Stroudsburg facility and upgrade the East Stroudsburg treatment plant. The plan would also construct a new 5.2 million-gallon-a-day plant at Delaware Water Gap. The whole thing is estimated to cost $14 million.

The cost under this proposal would be about $56 per household per year for treatment and transportation to the plants. The cost of local collection will be additional.

Borough Manager Donald Gage noted East Stroudsburg's present collection system would add an approximate $40 to the General Authority's $56 bill. Since the minimum annual sewer bill in the borough is $60, Gage said the new system as proposed could cost $96 minimum, and probably more.

Borough engineer William Hopkins noted the inflation from the 1973 Albright and Friel study to the 1975 study shot the estimated cost per dwelling unit from $41 to $65. He said by the time the project is built, that figure could also increase.

Gage reminded council whatever it decides to do, the treatment plant would have to be upgraded to meet state stream requirements and increase capacity.

Gage voiced objections to the plan and the way the General Authority is handling the matter.

"We're talking about a physical plan to protect the lower Broadheads Creek watershed," he said. "I don't think it's necessary we be represented as far as management and operation."

He said more than one copy of the latest draft should have been provided to each municipality and the methodology used should have been included in the report so valid comparisons could be made.

Boro ponders ways to clean water

EAST STROUDSBURG — The dirty water problem in East Stroudsburg has turned out to be worse than was first thought, and Borough Council Tuesday considered measures to alleviate it.

The problem first surfaced three or four weeks ago when residents called in complaining of dirty water ranging in color from yellow to dark brown — and even black.

The cause was traced to an overdose of a hardness-combating chemical called calgon.

More calgon got into the water than should have, probably through human error.

Since the borough does not test its water regularly, it was unaware of the problem until residents began calling in.

The large dose of calgon evidently loosened the deposits of iron and manganese in some of the old water pipes, releasing it into the drinking water.

Borough officials expected the problem to clear up within a matter of days, but weeks have gone by and dirty water is still reported in many sections of the community.

Council directed the borough manager, superintendent and water committee to study the situation and come up with recommendations towards a short-term solution.

Long-range solutions mentioned included replacement of old pipelines, cleaning out the water storage tank and closer monitoring of the chemical system at the plant.

At present, borough officials are not sure if the calgon overdose is the sole cause of the problem.

Carl Michaels, public works superintendent asked that residents experiencing dirty water call in so the borough will know which pipelines are affected.

In other business, the borough adopted the Crystal Street Urban Renewal Area plan.

Council decided to ask Berheimer Associates to post a $15,000 bond, rather than the $6,000 bond they proposed for the earned income tax.

The borough solicitor will review a proposed $10,000 contract with General Code Publishers Corp. of Spencerport, N.Y. for codification of the borough ordinances.

Value training helps kids turn off to drugs

STROUDSBURG — If an elementary school child can identify his values while still young, he or she will be less inclined to use drugs and alcohol when older.

Mike Nestor, Drug and Alcohol Clinic (D&A) specialist, said clinic staff members consider early value training helpful in preventing drug use.

"Value training is considered one of the better tools of drug and alcohol prevention," Nestor said Monday.

By helping a student develop a value system of his own which is comfortable and meaningful to him, he'll be better able to make his own decisions by the time he's 13," he continued.

D & A sponsored a value training program in 1973-74 in the Jim Thorpe School District, in 1974-75 in the East Stroudsburg School District and hopes to sponsor one this year in the Delaware Valley Schools.

The clinic supplied workbooks, puppets and other materials to the teachers for use with children in grades kindergarten to fifth grade.

Nestor said the program was supposed to put a child in a situation and let him express his feelings about what he would do.

One way this was done was with open-ended stories which required the children to make up the conclusion.

An example is a story about a child who finds a wallet containing money and identification. He starts home with it and is met by friends who suggest what to do with it.

"One may say to use the money to buy ice cream. Another may say to take the money and throw the wallet in the river. At that point in the story, the class can offer their opinions. The teacher stays out of that interaction as much as possible," Nestor explained.

Another way to help a child define his values is to put him in a situation where he must make decisions to solve a problem.

"Say there's a game and only eight kids from the whole room can be in it. Each child would be asked which kids he would choose to be in it and why," Nestor said.

D & A also supplied a "do-so" kit for the younger children.

The kit included puppets and taped stories and was designed to help a child see interactions and how different people relate or fail to relate.

Nestor said the program, suggested by former D & A administrator Dr. Bruce Duvall, was supposed to help young students clarify their own values.

It was also supposed to enhance various value categories, such as affection, power and wealth.

Nestor said young people will turn to drugs and alcohol out of boredom, alienation, peer pressure and the inability to make decisions.

If he is able to make his own decisions, he will be less inclined to begin to use drugs, Nestor explained.

So far the response to the values training program has been "pretty good."

Teacher fights suspension from Vo-Tech program

BARTONSVILLE — The attorney for a cosmetology instructor suspended by the Monroe County Area Vocational-Technical School said Tuesday it "strains my imagination" how the school could continue its cosmetology program while eliminating his client.

During a hearing before the Vo-Tech Joint Operating Committee, Mount Pocono attorney Peter J. O'Brien said the committee did not meet the criteria set forth by the Pennsylvania School Code when it suspended instructor Mrs. E. Magdalen Swatt on June 9, 1975.

Committee solicitor Samuel W. Newman stated Mrs. Swatt was suspended under section 1124.2 and 1125 of the code, which allows for suspension of staff if the program is curtailed or altered or if the pupil enrollment drops substantially.

In his testimony, Vo-Tech Director Alan K. Cohen produced no evidence of declining enrollments; he stated enrollments increased from 40 students last year to 50 students this year.

However, he said Mrs. Swatt was suspended and the program altered to skirt a Department of Labor and Industry regulation that states all buildings owned or leased by schools must provide safe access for physically handicapped students.

Cohen said that would have meant large expenditures for the school. Since cosmetology — presently taught at the Stroudsburg School of Cosmetology — will be moved into the Vo-Tech addition in two years when an addition is finished, Cohen said he recommended the committee lease the facility, the teachers and the program from the Stroudsburg School of Cosmetology.

The committee had leased just the building and provided its own instructor — Mrs. Swatt.

Cohen said he based his decision on a Basic Education Circular dated Feb. 26, 1975 and verbal messages from the Pennsylvania Department of Education that, if the program continued as it was, the school could lose state reimbursement.

But when Cohen could not produce written documents that some agency would close the cosmetology classes, O'Brien charged the committee had not abided by the law.

When asked if Vo-Tech would save money by eliminating Mrs. Swatt's $14,808 a year job this year, Cohen said no.

Newman said Mrs. Swatt will be rehired in two years when the program resumes at Vo-Tech. He said a decision by the committee will be rendered within 10 to 15 days.

Burglars nearly nabbed

HENRYVILLE — Two burglars nearly got caught in the act Monday night when the owner of a house they were burglarizing came home and surprised them.

Pocono Township police report the burglars took a shotgun, rifle, ammunition and cigarettes from the residence of Edwin Fisher, Henryville R.D. 1.

Fisher arrived home about 7 p.m. Monday and found the burglars in his house. They escaped in a red Ford, police said.

The investigation is continuing, according to police.

Hospital limits outpatient Blue Cross use

By DEBORAH ENYEART
Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — Not all Blue Cross cards will be honored at the General Hospital of Monroe County for payment of outpatient care.

Although the hospital will accept all Blue Cross cards for inpatient care, it will only accept Northeastern, Lehigh Valley and New Jersey Blue Cross cards for out-patients.

A hospital spokesman said Tuesday this rule is applied because the hospital has been unable to reach a billing agreement with Blue Cross in New York and Philadelphia.

The hospital sends the bill directly to the Blue Cross area specified by the cardholder for payment of out-patient services.

Thomas Jones, a spokesman for Northeastern Blue Cross, said the hospital's rule to only accept certain cards is "totally the hospital's prerogative."

The hospital spokesman said, however, that the problem lies with Blue Cross.

"We can't get a contract with New York or Philadelphia. We would welcome a breakthrough with either New York or Philadelphia," he said.

The hospital considers the Blue Cross out-patient situation a "significant problem year-round" because of the large numbers of people traveling in the area.

The spokesman said the problem is worse in the summer because of the large influx of tourists but is bad other times because of skiers, college students and travelers.

Approximately 12 to 15 per cent of the 27,000 to 30,000 people needing out-patient care in a year have Blue Cross cards from outside the accepted areas.

The spokesman said most of these cards are from New York and Philadelphia.

The patients are required to pay for the services and are given a receipt which they can present to their coverage area for reimbursement.

"It's for exactly this reason that the hospital accepts BankAmericard and Master Charge," the spokesman said.

If the patient doesn't have cash or an accepted credit card, the hospital will accept a personal check or will bill him at home.

However, many of the home-billings aren't paid because the hospital receives many false addresses. Now it is asking for identification for an address.

"It's quite an aggravation for the patient and the clerical staff and is a financial hardship for the patient and the hospital," the spokesman said.

"It's an aggravation to the clerks who have to explain to people that we won't accept their cards. It comes as a surprise to them and they get angry at the hospital," he continued.

The hospital expects the problem to get worse next year as more people travel to the East coast for bicentennial activities.

"Ideally, there should be a national bank to cover patients as there is for in-patients," he added.

No no-fault means you're at fault

STROUDSBURG — Starting today, Pennsylvania drivers who are uninsured could face a $500 fine and six months in jail.

If you thought the deadline was last month, you're right, except a 30-day extension was granted by the state as a grace period.

Most Monroe County drivers complied with the July 19 deadline, a survey of area insurance agencies disclosed Tuesday.

However, there were still some drivers who wanted insurance policies written at the last minute.

Jay S. Bartholomew, insurance agent from East Stroudsburg said he wrote over 200 policies in the last two weeks. He said he "averaged four or five a day" since the July 19 extension.

The new policies written during the past month was not as big a rush as he saw during the first two weeks of July before the 30-day extension was announced, Bartholomew said.

Joseph J. Vogt of Mount Pocono said he encountered "a few stragglers" during the 30-day grace period. He said he wrote several policies on Saturday and Monday but that "the heavy push was in July."

"People realize it's a law and they're concerned about it," Vogt stated.

Donald Hein of the Crowe Insurance Agency in East Stroudsburg said, "The big rush was all last month. Everyone recognized his responsibility and got it."

Mrs. Eileen Karpe, office manager of Karpe Insurance Service in Stroudsburg said they were "getting dribs and drabs" but that it hasn't been a tremendous amount.

Miss Sandra Selwood of Small and Son Insurance of Stroudsburg said the rush slowed this month compared to July. "We've had very few people come in this week for insurance cards," she said.

Cpl. Leonard Orzech of state police at Swiftwater said drivers will have five days to produce proof of insurance. If they do not, the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation will be notified to take action.

Austrian injuries fatal to Mark Donohue

GRAZ, Austria (UPI) — Race car driver Mark Donohue died at about 7 p.m. Tuesday night of complications that arose Sunday following an operation to remove a blood clot from his brain. Donohue suffered head injuries in an accident Sunday during a practice run for the Austrian Grand Prix.

Donohue won a legion of area racing fans when he captured the inaugural Schaefer 500 at Pocono International Raceway in 1971.

Donohue, 38, who emerged from retirement a year ago to try his hand at the Grand Prix wheel, remained unconscious and in serious condition through Tuesday, two days after the brain surgery. He became the second driver to die of injuries in two days. Veteran stock car driver Tiny Lund died Sunday following a six-car crash at the Talladega 500.

Donohue of Media, Pa., was trying to win his first Grand Prix event since joining the circuit for the Canadian Grand Prix last September. He had driven exclusively since 1966 for his friend and long-time associate Roger Penske, who along with Donohue's wife Eden staged a bedside vigil at the Austrian hospital. Donohue had won 57 major pro races during his career including the 1972 Indy 500.

Donohue complained of headaches shortly after a tire blew during his practice run and he lost control of his vehicle. The car rammed into the metal guard rail at the Oesterreichring circuit.

X-rays taken at Landes Grankenhau Hospital at revealed a blood clot and immediate surgery was dictated.

Penske flew to London Sunday upon hearing of Donohue's accident and is said to have brought one of Europe's leading neurosurgeons to Austria to look in on Mark. Manfred Schaller, a track official who was hurt in the accident, died Tuesday from internal injuries.

Donohue couldn't conceive of quitting a winner at the peak of his auto racing career.

He won 49 races in a spectacular career that included the 1972 Indy classic, the Canadian-American championship, three Trans-American titles, two United States road racing crowns and one in stock car racing.

In a retirement speech after winning the International

Race of Champions at Daytona on Feb. 15, 1974, Donohue reflected for a moment and said: "I've accomplished just about everything that I hoped to in racing. I'm 37 years old and I'm not going to get any better."

But the Brown University engineering graduate, considered one of the top chassis experts in the world, couldn't face the fact that he was relegated to a role of "backseat driver."

Last September, Donohue came out of retirement when his boss, Penske, made his Formula One debut with a car in the Canadian Grand Prix at Mosport and there were dreams in the Penske camp that Donohue would become the first American since Phil Hill to win the world driving championship.

But the Penske car never reached the factory's potential. Donohue never finished better than fifth in any 1975 Grand Prix race and too often was forced out by mechanical problems.

Donohue was a man driven by the need for safety in auto racing. He spent most of his career searching for ways to assure a driver that his car was not a torpedo designed for destruction solely for the enjoyment of blood-thirsty spectators. He instituted numerous measures to strengthen the structure of racing cars.

Labeled a "loner," Donohue denied that he refused to make close friends for fear they might die in racing accidents. He was a quiet man, dedicated to his job and often spoke in low tones. But what he had to say often had an impact on the sport.

Donohue, who set a world speed record at Talladega, Ala., in July, 1975, suffered serious knee injuries in 1972 in a sports car practice accident at Road Atlanta, Ga., that cost him a chance for the title. He won the series the following year in a Porsche, the same car in which he broke the world record.

Donohue made his Indianapolis debut in 1969, finishing seventh and earning Rookie of the Year honors. He was second to Al Unser at Indy in 1970, won the Pocono 500 in 1971 and Indy the following year. This spirit of having to be first finally cost Donohue his life.

He is survived by his wife and two sons, Michael and David.

IN HAPPIER TIMES — Mark Donohue, wearing the winner's garland, waves happily to the crowd in 1971 after winning the inaugural Schaefer 500 at Pocono International Raceway. The smiles ended for Donohue, 38, Tuesday when he died in an Austrian hospital of brain injuries suffered Saturday in a crash during practice for the Austrian Grand Prix.

Phillies knocked from first on May's homer in ninth

ATLANTA (UPI) — Pinch-hitter Dave May hit a two-run homer with two out in the last of the ninth Tuesday night to give the Atlanta Braves a 6-4 victory over Philadelphia, knocking the Phillies out of a tie for first place in the National League East.

The Pittsburgh Pirates, who defeated San Francisco 4-0, regained first place in the NL East by one full game.

Rookie shortstop Bob Belloir singled just before May connected off reliever Gene Garber for his eighth homer of the season.

Philadelphia jumped out in front in the top of the first when Greg Luzinski, the major leagues' runs batted in leader, doubled home Jay Johnstone and Philadelphia scored three

Mets, 6-3

HOUSTON (UPI) — Del Unser and Wayne Garrett belted homers and southpaw Jon Matlack, making his first start since Aug. 2, went 8 2-3 innings for the victory Tuesday night in a 6-3 triumph by the New York Mets over the Astros that spoiled the Houston managerial debut of Bill Virdon.

Matlack scored one run in the fifth when he singled, moved to

Cardinals, 2-1

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Run-scoring singles by Ted Simmons and Ted Sizemore plus a perfect 4-for-4 night at the plate by returnee Willie Davis backed the four-hit pitching of Lynn McGlothen Tuesday night and gave the St. Louis Cardinals a 2-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

The Cardinals, stopping a Cincinnati winning streak at nine games, got both of their runs in the first inning. Bake McBride singled and Davis, returning to the lineup after an absence of four days because of allometry problems, doubled. Simmons then singled home McBride, but Davis was retired at the plate on a strong throw by centerfielder Cesar Geronimo.

Dodgers, 2-1

CHICAGO (UPI) — Lee Lacy's triple to open the eighth inning turned into the winning run for the Los Angeles Dodgers Tuesday when John Hale hit a sacrifice fly to give reliever Mike Marshall his ninth win of the season in a 2-1 decision over the Chicago Cubs.

Tiant's parents will arrive soon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The parents of Cuban-born Boston Red Sox hurler Luis Tiant will arrive in Boston later this week to watch their son pitch a major league game for the first time, a spokesman for Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., said Tuesday.

The spokesman said it was not clear exactly when they would arrive, but he said they were expected to be granted visas in Mexico City either Tuesday or today.

The Tiant's flew there from Cuba last week after the Castro government, responding to a request from Brooke, allowed them to leave. Tiant met his mother in Mexico three years ago, a Red Sox spokesman said, but has not seen his father in more than a decade.

"We don't know specifically when they are coming to Boston," the spokesman for Brooke said. "They will get their visas either Tuesday or Wednesday and then they are ready to go. We assume they will arrive Thursday in Boston, that's our best guess."

He said the Tiant's would be given a month visa.

The Red Sox spokesman said Tiant was expected to pitch tonight in Kansas City where the team in finishing a two-week road trip and would not pitch in Boston until probably Tuesday.

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Houston Astros, skidding toward the worst season in their 13 years, Tuesday fired Preston Gomez and named ousted New York Yankee manager Bill Virdon to take immediate control of the team.

Virdon had just come off his third fishing trip in 17 days since he left the Yankee job when new Astros general manager Tal Smith called him Monday.

"I said, 'Let's go,'" Virdon told newsmen at a news conference at the Astrodome. "I had always wanted a shot at Houston."

Virdon, 44, and the manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates for two seasons before going to the Yankees became the seventh Astros manager. He was given a contract through 1976.

"I went to Pittsburgh and I was expected to win," said Virdon. "I went with the Yankees and I was expected to win. The only difference here is I know we can't win — this year."

Houston became the first team in the major leagues to be eliminated from title contention Monday. For the remaining 34 games, Virdon said he will evaluate the talent and help the Astros play spoiler.

"They've already been doing that pretty regularly," he said. "Beating Pittsburgh four straight. I noticed that."

Gomez, 52, left the Astros after an encouraging 1974

season and a disastrous year in 1975. The death of pitcher Don Wilson and an early season injury to Greg Gross hampered Gomez' chances to improve the team, but many of his players simply said they could not communicate with him.

The pitching staff remembered Gomez for a Sept. 4, 1974, incident when he lifted Wilson for a pinch hitter in the eighth inning, despite his pitcher having a no-hitter.

Astros fans, unaware that Gomez wanted to institute a youth movement in 1975 but was overruled, came to the Astrodome less and less. Attendance was down more than 225,000 from 1974, and that was an all-time low.

Smith was executive vice president with the Yankees when Virdon managed there.

"Obviously, I think he was the most qualified and the best candidate to direct the Astros in the future," Smith said.

"Bill has been a winner as a player, he's been a winner as a manager and I'm confident in the future he will be able to direct a winner here in Houston."

Virdon played at St. Louis and Pittsburgh for 11 years. He managed the Pirates his first year to a division pennant, but was fired late in the 1973 season with his team three games behind the Cardinals.

The Yankees finished second Virdon's first year with them, but this season when they were 10 games out he was replaced by Billy Martin.

Preston Gomez: Out of a job

Connors, Evert established as Forest Hills top seeds

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jimmy Connors and Chris Evert, love lost between them, head the seedings for the U.S. Open tennis championships which get underway Wednesday, Aug. 27 at Forest Hills.

Their selection was obvious, for Connors, the defender, can handle any surface and despite his loss in the Wimbledon final to Arthur Ashe the 22-year-old tyrant of the court remains the No. 1 player in the world.

Chris, a defeated semi-finalist four consecutive years in the Open, is an overwhelming choice this year since the West Side Tennis Club surface has been changed from grass to a clay composition, where Miss Evert is all but unbeatable.

Billie Jean King has decided not to defend, insisting the Wimbledon title this year would remain as her fitting farewell to singles competition. At Wimbledon, Billie defeated Miss Evert in a memorable semifinal to preserve her record of never having lost to Chris on grass.

The men's seedings reflect the importance of the new surface, and the continuing decline of Australian power.

Following Connors, the list puts clay court specialists Guillermo Vilas of Argentina and Manuel Orantes of Spain second and third, Arthur Ashe, the Wimbledon king, fourth, Bjorn Borg of Sweden fifth and Tom Okker of The Netherlands sixth.

The first Aussie to appear is Tony Roche in the seventh slot, and Romania's tempestuous Ilie Nastase rounds out the top eight.

A year ago, Aussies John Newcombe and Ken Rosewall were in the top eight, with Newcombe seeded second and Rosewall fifth. Newcombe, winner over Connors in the Australian final on New Year's Day but whipped by the American in their TV spectacular, is out of the tournament because of a leg injury. The 40-year-old Rosewall, humiliated by Connors 6-1, 6-0, 6-1, in last year's final, has had his fill of Jimmy and "for personal reasons" declined to enter this time around.

Conspicuous by his absence not only from the top eight but from the entire seeded list of 16 is Stan Smith, the winner in 1971. The lanky American has fallen on evil days, going without a major title for almost two years.

The second eight is headed by Rod Laver, the 37-year-old all-time great who last won at Forest Hills in 1969, the year he became the only man to win the Grand Slam twice.

Roscoe Tanner, the fireballing service artist from Lookout Mountain, Tenn., who whipped Connors on grass at Nottingham prior to Wimbledon, is next on the list.

In tenth place is the Mexican clay artist Raul Ramirez, whose victory over Smith proved decisive in the U.S. Davis Cup defeat in February.

John Alexander, a highly touted Aussie of a few years ago who seems to be fulfilling some of that promise is 12th, and the diminutive and patient American, Harold Solomon, is 13th.

Connors' young friend, Vitas Gerulaitis, gains his first Forest Hills seeding in the 14th position, with 1973 Wimbledon winner Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia 15th and veteran Cliff Richey of San Angelo, Tex. completing the 16.

Miss Evert is followed by Britain's Virginia Wade, who is enjoying her finest year since winning the first U.S. Open in 1968. Teen-age slugger Martina Navratilova of Czechoslovakia, second to Miss Evert on the money won list with $115,163 and twice a winner over Chris on the winter circuit, is the third seed.

Evonne Goolagong Cawley, the newly-wed, is placed fourth and the great lady, Margaret Court, is fifth. Following the two Aussie girls are Russia's Olga Morozova, France's Francoise Durr and America's Julie Heldman in the final three spots.

Training camp roundup

NFL teams trim the fat from their rosters

CHESTER, Pa. (UPI) — The Philadelphia Eagles Tuesday released five players, including second-year defensive end Willie Cullars and veteran guard Mark Ellison.

The others released to get the Eagles squad down to the required 55 players were rookies Keith Rowen, a guard from Stanford, Bob Bozeman, tight end from Mississippi State and linebacker Ed Shubert, a free agent from Drexel University in Philadelphia.

Cullars, from Kansas State and the Eagles seventh round draft choice in 1974, played in 13 games last year on the special team and as a reserve defensive end.

Falcons

GREENVILLE, S.C. (UPI) — Ted Fritsch, No. 2 center for the Atlanta Falcons, was reported Tuesday lost for the season because of torn ligaments in his leg suffered in Saturday's exhibition game with the Baltimore Colts.

Falcons Coach Marion Campbell said Paul Ryczek, a 238-pound second year man who was twice an All-Atlantic Coast Conference selection while at the University of Virginia, would move into Fritsch's spot as backup man to starting all-pro center Jeff Van Note.

Campbell also reported that the Falcons waived three veterans — defensive tackle Larry Bailey, wide receiver Louis Neal, and running back Tom Smith, to cut down to the NFL limit.

Rams

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Rams waived defensive back Mike Pink and middle linebacker Rich Baska Tuesday to get the squad down to the league limit of 55 players.

Fink, a two-year veteran from Missouri, played for the

New Orleans Saints before joining the Rams. Baska, a UCLA graduate, was with the Rams last year but sat out the entire season because of an injury.

Redskins

CARLISLE, Pa. (UPI) — Veteran receivers Bill Malinchak and John Isenbarger were cut by the Washington Redskins along with two rookies Tuesday to reduce the team roster to 55 players.

The first year men released by coach George Allen were offensive tackles Bill Ellenbogen from Virginia Tech and Mark Doak from Nebraska.

Malinchak, a ten-year veteran originally drafted by Detroit, played mainly on the Redskins specialty teams and led the Redskins to a win over the Minnesota Vikings with two blocked punts early in the 1972 season. He was claimed by the San Diego Chargers after injuries sidelined him later in that year but was re-acquired by Washington in 1973.

Bills

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (UPI) — The League Buffalo Bills Tuesday cut four rookie free agents and a former World Football League refugee in trimming their roster to 54 players — one below the limit.

Cut were quarterback Bruce Shaw and four rookies — reserve kicker Mike Dean and three defensive players.

Shaw did not play in either of the Bills' two preseason games and became expendable when Buffalo picked up quarterback Jack Graham from Miami.

Graham took over as the team's third quarterback behind Joe Ferguson and Gary Marangi.

Cardinals

CHARLESTON, Ill. (UPI) — Veteran running back Ken Willard was placed on the reserve-injured list Tuesday by the St. Louis football Cardinals.

Willard, acquired in a trade last year with the San Francisco 49ers, suffered a knee injury in the fourth game of last season. He returned for the final three games following surgery. However, the club said his knee has not improved sufficiently in the offseason.

Packers

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI) — The Green Bay Packers moved to bolster their offensive line Tuesday by signing former Chicago Bear tackle Randy Jackson.

Jackson is a nine-year veteran and was cut by the Bears last week. He was a regular for three seasons and last year divided his time between center and tackle.

Biddy football

sign-ups set

BROOKHEADSVILLE — Registration for the fifth and sixth grade biddy football program sponsored by the Western Pocono Jaycees will be held at 6 p.m. Monday, August 25 at Pleasant Valley High School.

Physical examinations for all candidates will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday, August 27 at Pleasant Valley High School.

NASCAR drivers bury 'Tiny' Lund

MONCKS CORNER, S.C. (UPI) — Dewayne "Tiny" Lund, a 6-foot-4, 250-pound stock car driver whose "heart was larger than his imposing stature," was buried Tuesday by the men with whom he raced and fished.

Lund, 42, was killed Sunday in a six-car wreck in the Talladega 500 in Talladega, Ala.

Lund was a favorite in NASCAR racing circles, famous for his easy humor and his jokes in the pit area. Although a native of Iowa, he was considered one of the "good old boys" of Southern stock car racing.

He was described the Rev. Robert Major as a "big man with a big heart."

Services for Lund were held at the red brick St. Michael Lutheran Church in this small coastal community. Lund operated a fish camp about 15 miles west of here on Lake Moultrie.

The small church was jammed, and about 200 people stood outside trying to escape the 90-degree temperatures in the shade of oak and pine trees behind the church. The services were broadcast to them via loudspeakers.

NASCAR officials and drivers were present for the services, including Buddy Baker, who won Lund's last race and used to fish with him on Lake Moultrie.

Lund was buried in Berkeley Memorial Gardens about two miles from here.

starting five games for Chicago at center.

Broncos

DENVER (UPI) — The Denver Broncos Tuesday announced four cuts, including 14th round draft choice Jerry Arnold, to bring their roster to 57.

The Broncos also cut veterans Ralph Cindrich, a fourth-year linebacker from Pittsburgh; Rob Spicer, a third-year linebacker from Indiana; Dave Grannell, a second-year tight end from Arizona State, and rookie Mike Terry.

Bengals

WILMINGTON, Ohio (UPI) — Rookies Lofell Williams and Rollen Smith were cut by the Cincinnati Bengals Tuesday as the club trimmed its roster to 54, not including three rookies who played in the College All-Star Game.

Your Horoscope

Frances Drake

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) — A stimulating day, but don't let your enthusiasms cause you to take on more than you can handle. Easy does it!
TAURUS (April 21 to May 21) — An excellent day for making new contacts, putting unique ideas into action. On the personal side, there's a possibility of new romance.
GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) — A splendid Mercury day. Especially favored: writers, journalist, editors; those in the advertising and promotion fields; those in all branches of aviation.
CANCER (June 22 to July 23) — Accept the fact that, temporarily, differences of opinion will be inevitable. Thus, you'll watch your step and do nothing to increase tensions.
LEO (July 24 to August 23) — A day in which to curb your innate aggressiveness with intelligent self-discipline and stress moderation. Extremism of any kind could alienate others.
VIRGO (August 24 to September 23) — An exciting, stimulating day. Act with confidence. Luck is with you in dealing with superiors, experts in all lines.
LIBRA (September 24 to October 23) — Augment your efforts ad those of others with whatever is available in sound devices, methods and production step-up. New opportunities indicated. Prepare!
SCORPIO (October 24 to November 23) — You won't be able to accomplish all you desire, so don't try to crowd yourself or others. Stay "on target" — competent, but not pressured.
SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21) — Shun breakneck speed, but neither delay nor be tardy in action. Both extremes, and others MUST be curbed.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20) — Put past doubts, disappointments behind you; they only put limits on future progress. You could not add the "twist" that boosts projects to success.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19) — Your analyses, conjectures, decisions must be given plenty of time in order to prevent errors. Be alert. Artistic pursuits highly favored.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20) — Your innately good style, demeanor and co-operative attitude can win laurels. Indifference or reluctance, however, will surely disenchant others and hurt your cause. So... your best! YOU BORN TODAY have an ardent, enthusiastic outlook on life; are endowed with an outgoing personality and the enviable gift of leadership. You are capable of reaching the top in almost any career you choose, and could go especially far in fields which involve dealing with the public. You are highly emotional so must learn to avoid impulsiveness, going to extremes.

The bidding:
South West North East
1♥ Pass 2♠ Pass
2♥ Pass 3♥ Pass

Opening lead—ace of spades. This deal occurred in the match between Israel and Denmark during the 1972 World Bridge Olympiad. It demonstrates two important points. One is that there is such a thing as a player being overly cautious in the bidding, and the other is that it is better to take a small loss by intentionally overbidding, than to pass and possibly take a large loss. When Schwartz and Stampf held the North-South cards for Israel at the first table, they got to four hearts on the bidding shown and made ten tricks for a score of 420 points. West's pass of one heart is difficult to understand. Most players would either double one heart or overcall with two diamonds, and they assuredly would not resolve the choice by taking no action at all. The pass by West was much too timid, and eventually proved very expensive. When Denmark held the North-South cards at the second table, the bidding was much more spirited. It went:

South West North East
1♥ Dble 3♠ 4♠
5♠ 5♦ Pass Pass
5♥ 5♠ 6♠ Pass

Here both sides bid their cards forcibly and well, the Danish North finally winding up at six clubs doubled and going down two — 300 points — for a team loss of 720 points. North judged that his vulnerable opponents could make five spades, worth 650 points, and he bid six clubs knowing that he did not make that contract but that the sacrifice was worth while. His only losers were a spade, a heart and a diamond.
